Doetrn. SHE LOVED HIM.

BY GRORGE P. MORRIS. Bile loved him; but she knew it not-lier heart had only room for pride, a All other feelings were forgot. When she become another's bride. As from a dream the then awoke, To realize her lonely state, and own it was the vow she broke That made her drear and desolate.

She loved him; but the slanderer came, with words of hate that all believed; A slain thus rested on his name. Hit he was wrong'd and she deceived. Ah rash the act that gare her hand, That drove her lover from her side, Who hed him to a distant land, Where, battling for a name, he died,

She loved him; and his memory now Was treasured as a thing apart;
The shades of thought were on her brow
The seeds of death were in her heart.
For all the warld, that thing foriors
I would not could not be and live.
This cashet, with its jewel gone—
A bride who has no heart to give.
