Antecedents of the Nominees of the National Democracy.

We have room only for a brief notice of the ballot presented by the National Democrat, which closed its deliberations at the Maryland Institute, in the city of Baltimore, on Saturday evening last.

MICHAEL BRACKENRIDGE.

John C. Breckinridge is thirty years old and Vice-President of the United States. He is a Kentuckian, born near Lexington, January 19, 1821, and is a scholar, lawyer and soldier. His political education was received at Centre College, Princeton, Pennsylvania Institutute, and on the roads of Mexico, where he served as major of infantry. After the close of the Mexican war, he returned to his practice at the bar, but was soon elected to the Legislature of Kentucky, and very soon after that against the National. Issue of Representatives where he served from 1851 to 1855.

During the latter period he was offered the mission to Spain by President Pierce.

This was a glittering temptation, to so young a man, but after a short reflection the offer was modestly, but firmly declined, because his business and personal affairs required home attention, and be gave up his desire to travel for a time from public life. This purpose he obeyed and until the Cincinnati convention in 1856, by spontaneous suffrage, afterwards confirmed by the people, made him Vice-President of the United States.

By virtue of this office he is now presiding over the American Senate. His term does not expire until the 3d of March, 1861, but he has already been returned to the Senate to represent the State of Kentucky from that day until March 3d, 1867.

Major Breckinridge is a person six feet high, with a light, well-knit, graceful form, moulded for activity and strength. His first election to Congress was a wonderful achievement.

The district for which he was returned was the district and home of Henry Clay, a man for whom Major D. always entertained an exalted opinion.

The district was wholly by a majority of sixteen hundred.

His competitor, General Leitch, Coombs, was one of the shrewdest tacticians and ablest debaters in Kentucky. Yet Mr.

Breckinridge, bearing down this heavy majority and this strong antagonist, was elected by a majority of more than five hundred. The result was a subject of wonder in all political circles. In his second canvas the whigs availed a resolute purpose to recover the district, and brought into the field Governor Fletcher —an experienced campaigner of great ability and established reputation, and altogether the strongest whig in the State.

This canvass was the hottest kind, and as may well remember, the intensest and most exciting spread over the whole country. But the second victory of the rising young democracy was even more significant than the first.

Following this came the protracted mission to Spain and its arduous negotiations.

Then the spontaneous call to the Vice-President, then his election to the Senate, and now his nomination for the Presidency.

GENERAL LANE.

Gen. Joseph Lane, the candidate for Vice-President on the ticket with Mr.

Breckinridge, is a native of North Carolina, and is in the 50th year of his age.

As far as his father settled in Kentucky, but shortly afterwards the subject of this sketch settled in Indiana, where he became a mercantile clerk until 1822, the early of age he went to the legislature, and was re-elected for a period of twenty-four years. In 1840, on the breaking out of the Mexican war, he resigned his seat in the Indiana Senate, and entered Capt. Walker's company of volunteers as a private. He was, however, before leaving for the seat of war, unanimously elected Colonel of the Indiana Legion, and in a few days after was appointed by President Polk as Infirmier General. He immediately joined Gen. Taylor on the Brazos.

The heroic conduct of Gen. Lane throughout the whole war, both under Gen. Taylor and Gen. Scott, gained for him the proud title of the Marion of the army. At the end of the Mexican war, he was returned to Indiana and followed the pursuit of a farmer, but was soon elected Governor of Oregon, which he prosecuted overland in advance of the expedition of Col. Fremont, so many of whose men perished on the route.
Gen. Lane performed the trip in six months, despite several of his members of starvation, deserted. Gen. L.
Lane, as Governor of Oregon until the 13th of June, 1851, was succeeded by B. W. Williams, who was elected by a large majority of the people, and was appointed to succeed him, and requested to make immediate payment. Gen.
Lane, however, refused to do so, and under his hand this 5th day of June, 1860.

Examiner's Notice.

THE undersigned Examiner, appointed by the Commissioners of Montgomery county to ascertain whether the public convenience requires a change in the location of the road leading from Gaithersburg, in the Union, into the town of Rockville, in the state of Maryland, hereby gives notice that he will be present on the 14th of July next, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., to receive all persons who may be desirous of giving their evidence in regard to the said road.

He will remain at the place of meeting till the close of the day, and will then proceed to the examination of the evidence given.

This is the climax of the inquiry. I would remark that the Self-Raker is a perfect and completely invented invention.
