

EXHIBITION.
To test here Harold's love I hung
Entranced upon his rival's arms,
With glowing lips his soul I stung
And glistened in his ravine arms.

Artemus Ward's Interview with the Prince.
Artemus Ward, the Showman—the man of many experiences and unfeigned humor—has seen the Prince. The interview between these distinguished persons is supposed to have taken place at Sarma, and A. Ward, tells his story as follows:
He handed me a cigar & we sat down on the Piazza & conversed smoking right cheerfully. "Wall," said Albert Edward, how's the old folks?"

Artemus Ward's Interview with the Prince.
The Prince looked at me and said: "The old man didn't keep any keys that he would give to the old man in the course of years. We cut and tacked them on him and he liked them & they were his only property."

Artemus Ward's Interview with the Prince.
"That's true," said Albert Edward, and the doctors will carry the Queen off of this case, sure as you live."
The time now before me to take my departure. I rose up and said: "Albert Edward, I must go, but please to do me the favor that you will send me a line to let me know how you get on. I will be glad to hear from you."

Artemus Ward's Interview with the Prince.
"The local editor of the Nashville Patriot will have it in his power to send the latest. The editor of the Louisville Messenger, who has a wife to take care of him, went the other night to a lady. Fair. He says he saw there 'an article' which he 'fain would own. He it was not for sale. He declares that since that night, he is 'wretchedly wretched.' As the 'article' was found in a paper, the reader is left to infer that it was either a girl or a keg of whiskey. They are both calculated to make a wretched wretchedness. Louisville Courier.

Artemus Ward's Interview with the Prince.
"A Printer to the Last.—During the last moments of Win, a Rochester printer, who lately died, he was heard to say, having relaxed into semi-delirious state: 'I am on my last stick full—I am coming to a paragraph—and I suppose I'll have to wait for old death to put in the period.'"
An Irishman meeting a countryman, inquired his name.
"Walsh," responded Paddy, "are you from Dublin? I know two odd pairs there of that name; was either of 'em your mother?"

Artemus Ward's Interview with the Prince.
"Persons who sport money upon races are likely to come into connection with good company, as all events alike are continually in with their betters." Another advantage is that they can never be hard up for a dinner, as they always have a stack.
"Good morning, Mr. Henpeck, have you got any daughters that would make good typewriters?"
"Not exactly, but I have got a wife that would make a first-rate devil."
