Letter of Esq. Dr. J. C. L.

Gov. Baumer's Resignation

Gordford, who was chosen for the term of four years and for the term of four years

he declined, was a Whig.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

but he is not a good man.

He is a good man,

THE SENTINEL

THE WARNEWS.

Official Report of the Battle of Brandywine.
Gen. J. E. B. Stuart has made a detailed report of the battle of Brandywine, which was as follows:

Eleventh Virginia Volunteers, Col. S. Gandy; Sixth South Carolina Volunteers, Col. Secret; Tenth Alabama Volunteers, Col. J. H. Harvey; First Kentucky Volunteers, Col. Thomas H. Taylor—making an aggregate force of 1,000 cavalry, 1,000 mounted riflemen, 1,000 North Carolina Cavalry, Maj. Gordon. After detailing various preliminary movements, the report proceeds as follows:

When our forces took their position the fire of the artillery opened at 6 A.M., and a part artillery took to their heels. The right wing was ordered forward, and the Tenth Alabama rushed with a shout in a shower of bullets, under the lead of Col. Forney and Lieut. Col. Martin, the latter falling in the charge, part of his body being severed, and a positive slight the fence, from which the enemy felt the truncheons of their aim at short range. The Colonel was here severely wounded and had to retire. In his absence the command devolved upon Major Woodward.

The Eleventh Virginia, holding position on the left, did not move until 7 A.M., when the fire of the enemy's cavalry was still continued. The Sixth South Carolina gradually gained ground up to the front, and being with the Tenth Alabama, exposed to the fire of the enemy's sharpshooters from a rocky bank, was severely wounded.

Mr. Gandy to Col. Taylor, First Kentucky, were given through Col. Forney: "I am sorry to know, by the communication you have just received, that the State of Maryland owned the field, and I am compelled to give up the pursuit." That the State of Maryland owned the field, and I am compelled to give up the pursuit.

After the action had been fought, I found that the enemy, being already twice larger than my own, was recovering from the effects of the battle, and that their progress in the fight, I regret to say that the First Kentucky and the Sixth South Carolina took each other for the enemy, and a few casualties occurred in consequence, but with that exception, the whole force acted with a singular degree of self-command, and with entire knowledge of the true position of their opponents.

R. J. T. That the X. Corps, I believe, had the best of the day, and I am compelled to give up the pursuit.
