

REMARKS.

From the Norfolk Day Book of Jan. 30. We announced some days ago that General Beauregard had been transferred from his position on the Potomac to the command of the forces at Columbus. We cannot witness his departure without expressing the deep sense of admiration and gratitude which is felt towards him by the people of Virginia, military and civil, and of the whole South within his limits.

The enthusiasm which was kindled for him by the successful reduction of Fort Sumter, has been only increased and intensified by his subsequent services on the banks of the Potomac. He was then comparatively an unknown man, and there were many who said that, although he had served with marked distinction in the Mexican war, his services at Charleston were too narrow a foundation upon which to build up the reputation of a great man.

All acknowledge now, however, that the brilliant power of the rising sun has been more than surpassed by its meridian glory. For nearly a year (ten Beauregard has been the center of the Southern South in Virginia, of the enemy at Washington, and of an interested world. It is needless to say that he has come out of the furnace like pure gold, and now stands by common consent one of the first military men whom America has ever produced.

As a gentleman of the highest type of honor and the most rigid and exemplary virtues, he would command respect even if not distinguished by talent. It is needless to say that he is the idol of the soldiers, to whom his ornate qualities have united him with looks of steel, so that they would follow him to the death, not only from confidence in his leadership, but from devotion to his person. The correspondent of the London Times, in sketching this illustrious general, spoke of the stern gravity of his demeanor, which, in his likeness, approaches almost to solemnity. It is a face indicating that we most like and respect among mankind—that rarest of characters among our race—a single-minded, earnest man.

A patriot and an honest man indeed—a man without guile, who loves the South, not because it gives him distinction or power—in this noble gentleman and Christian hero. He is willing to serve in any place and under any flag, so that he can serve the cause which is dearer to him than honors, position and life itself.

Peace Resolutions of the Maryland Legislature.

RESOLUTIONS, 1861. WHEREAS, the Legislature of the General Assembly of Maryland, the war now waged by the Government of the United States upon the people of the Confederate States, is unconstitutional in its purpose and character, and a violation of the principles of the Declaration of Independence, and of the principles of the free principles upon which the Federal Union was founded, and certain to result in the bloodiest and most oppressive of our raining institutions; and

WHEREAS, the people of Maryland, while recognizing the obligation of their State, as a member of the Union, to submit in good faith to the exercise of all the legal and constitutional powers of the General Government, and to join as one man in fighting its authorized battles, do nevertheless, in the great American principle of self-government, and sympathize deeply with their Southern brethren in their noble and manly determination to resist and defend the sanctity and inviolability of their State, and to turn away from their own account the calamities of civil war, but for the blood of humanity, and to avoid the want in shedding of fraternal blood, in a miserable contest which can bring nothing but ruin, shame and destruction, the people of Maryland, unitedly and in common, do hereby, on the side of reconciliation and peace; now, therefore, it is hereby

Resolved, That the State of Maryland does hereby protest against the war which the Federal Government has declared upon the Confederate States of the South, and our sister and neighbor, Virginia, and to announce her determination to have no part or lot, directly or indirectly, in the prosecution.

Resolved, That the people of Maryland do hereby protest against the war which the Federal Government has declared upon the Confederate States of the South, and our sister and neighbor, Virginia, and to announce her determination to have no part or lot, directly or indirectly, in the prosecution.
