The avarice of trade, ever realy to genuine tea and coffee.

I can but advise the public to avoid advertise by the year. ed to their notice by speculators on their beaccompanied with the author's name, other-necessities. Rye and wheat are far the wise they will not be inserted. try they have been constantly used, in whole or in part, as substitutes for coffee and tea, and form a portion of every meal. They are infinitely cheaper than any of the substances offered for sale in the shop, and moreover have no hurtful the shop, and moreover have no hurtful effect on the system, and of this we have no certain assurances in the various subtrict, and particularly the River portion of it stances for sale in the stores.

The quantity of genuine coffee to be used will depend on the consumer, but as little as one-eighth part will impart a very decided and pleasant coffee flavor to the wheat or rye necessary for daily use. I have fraquently partaken of coffee made in this manner, and found it to be pleasant to the taste, and fulfilling in a great attention to all the appropriate of the full manner.

ant to the taste, and fulfilling in h great measure all the purposes of the full amount of genuine coffee.

Mode of Preparing for Use. The genuine coffee should be put in the oven for roasting first, and when about half or two-thirds done, the rye or what should then be added, and the whole stirred together until properly burnt. This precaution should not be neglected, as if both the wheater rye and cuffee are put in the oven at the same time, if the This precaution should not be neglected, as if both the wheat or rye will be entered by the coffee be properly rozated, the wheat or rye will be charred and rendered worth-less, or if the wheat and in these our country abounds—I speak from personal knowledge having lessed the above lessed in the coffee will be imperfectly rozated. A little experience will room learn any good housewife (and in these our country abounds—I speak from personal knowledge) how long to rozat the coffee before adding the rye or wheat and also what proportion of the latter sky be best to mix with genuine coffee. Some persons prefer wheat, some rye alone, and some squal parts of the two as the administrator. This is a question which the taste and the public generally, that every effect, on it have the desired of the two as the administrator. This is a question which the taste and the public generally will always be amplied with the connect with his line to washington and line and sequence of the work and rye gallound be freed. The wheat and rye gallound be freed.

The wheat and rye abould be freed from garlie and all other foreign subbe well washed, dried and put at his away for use. The present market price of wheat is about a dollar and a quarter, and rye about 70 cents a bushel.

With one or both of these mixed with a small but still much greater quantity of coffee than in the substitutes which are offered for sale, the public will have an agreeable, atrengthening beverage, and what is of great consideration, a healthy substitute for pure, genuine Those who cannot procure coffee will find in these when used alone, the next best thing to, and should use nothing clse as a substitute for it.

JAMES HIGGINS, Analytic and Consulting Chemist. Baltimore, July 6, 1862.

The Radical Policy. It is painfully apparent to every observer of passing events that the more radical of the Republicans in and out of Congress have abandoned all expectation They of restoring the Government. for months simed to accomplish this. They care nothing for the Constitution-nothing for anything, save to grab what they can get, and destroy everything clse. They are trying to make the war a war of extermination, as against the white men of the South; and by every method in their power are encouraging a spirit of bitterness and hate which is more significant of outsight barbarism than the civilization and refine ment of which we have so louilly boasted They encouraged the men of the border-slave States to make immenio sacrifices for the defence of the Union, and are now threatening them with the instant emancipation of their slaves if they will not themselves inaugurate some gradual system. Confiscation is meant only for these States, for here only can the law which has passed Congress ever be enforced. They know that these States are tied, hand and foot, and cannot resist their oppression. These are to be kept, though only in part protected against the ravages of the Confederates; against the ravages of the Confederates; while the cotton States are to be left out of the Union and punished. They are to be used, perhaps, as negro colonies; at least, nothing short of the actual ex-tion, and having verified its general ac-euracy. I have both bought and sold by it, and I believe it may be useful to many farmers where the means of weigh-
