

MR. MERRICK'S SPEECH.

Vassago, and deprived of her place in the Senate, then the West will begin to calculate the justice of the present political arrangement. She feels now that, in this war, she has done all the fighting and paying all the taxes. [Immense applause.]

The high tariff exacted by the manufacturers of Massachusetts at the expense of the farmers of Illinois, and that continually growing and increasing debt may make this unjust and injurious policy the permanent habit of the government. The West and the South, upon this question, agree in that great principle of political economy that leaves trade unembarrassed by legislative enactments. They would support the government and pay its debts, not by enriching capital at the expense of labor, but by taxing capital and protecting labor. They would have as the universal rule of commerce throughout the world, "FREE TRADE AND EQUAL RIGHTS."

In a contest on these principles, without her southern ally, the West would exert a power in the government entirely disproportionate to her extent of area and her population.
New England, with twelve Senators, has an area of 65,022 square miles and a population of 3,187,301 souls.
The northwestern States, with fourteen Senators, have an area of 385,583 square miles and a population of 7,602,220 souls.

Ohio and Illinois, having together an area of 95,860 square miles, are nearly one-fourth larger than all New England, and a population of 4,551,855 souls, nearly one-fourth larger than the population of all New England, have four Senators, or only one-third of the representation of New England in that body.
The New England States have as large a population at this time as they will have for many years to come. The West is increasing with incalculable rapidity, and her fertile fields can sustain a population as large as that of the Russian dominions. Massachusetts has a population of one hundred and fifty-seven to the square mile, and when Illinois shall have a population bearing the same proportion to her area, she will number her people as eight millions one hundred and ninety-eight thousand. This disproportion must, therefore, become greater and more apparent in each succeeding year.

The West would maintain the Union as our fathers made it, and by the same compromises; and unembarrassed by any sentiment of abstract rights, but influenced by sound judgment, acting upon rights established by law, and dealing with systems and conditions, not as she would have made them in the first instance, but as she finds them existing now, will preserve the Union. And we shall yet behold, in the front of the great procession of nations, the banner of the Republic, with its honor unshaken, its glory undiminished, and replanted with the effluence of all its stars. [Long-continued applause and cheering.]

FACT, FURY AND FANCY.

Common sense is valuable in all kinds of business, except love-making.
A sweet temper in a wife is worth more to a husband than a sugar plantation.
There are two reasons why we don't trust a man: One because we don't know him, and the other because we do.
The man who was stuck up with his own hook at present. In case the hook should give way, let him lie upon his own liabilities until he is prepared to sleep on a clear conscience.

The following slanderous paragraph goes unrebuked: A wag has invented a new telegraph. He proposes to place a line of women (widows preferred) fifty steps apart, and commit the news to the first as a secret.
A couple of old toppers in some way got into a quarrel, and, for a time, hurled all the approved blackguardism of the pot-house at each other, when one of them determined to extinguish the other immediately, said: "Go, I have no more to say, I know you as I do a glass of water."

A minister had a quarrel with one of his parishioners by the name of Harly, who showed considerable resentment. On the succeeding Sunday, the divine preached from the following text, which he pronounced with great emphasis, and with a significant look at Harly, who was present: "There is no fool like the fool Harly."

The beauty of woman transcends all other forms of beauty, as well in the sweetness of its suggestions as in the fervor of the admiration it evokes. The beauty of a lovely woman is an inspiration, a sweet delirium, a gentle madness. Her looks are love-potions. Heaven itself is never so clearly revealed to us as in the face of a beautiful woman.—Boyer's Institutions.

Aliving heart and pleasant countenance are commodities which a man never should fall to take home with him.—They will beat season his food and soften his pillow.—If there's a great thing for a man that his wife and children could truly say of him, "He never brought a frown across his threshold."
SARACIN.—Did you present your account to the accountant? Inquired a lawyer of his client.
"I did," said the client.
"Was it a fair one?"
"Was it a fair one?"
"Did you get the full amount?"
"Did you get the full amount?"
"Did you get the full amount?"
