"WILD OATS."

When all the world is young, lad, And all the trees are green, And every goose a swan, lad, And every lass a queen, Then fly for boot and horse, lad, And round the world away, Young blood must have its course, lad, And every dog his day.

When all the world is did, lad,
And all the trees are brown,
And all the sport is stale, lad,
And all the sport is stale, lad,
And all the wheels run down,
Greep home and take your place there,
The spent and malmed among,
God grant you find a face there
You loved when you was young.

It is said that about a pint of this mixture will cover a square jard upon the outside of a house, if properly applied. Brushes more or less small may be used according to the neatness of the job required. It answers as well as oil or paint on wood or stone, and is much chasper. It retains its brilliancy for many years. There is nothing of the kind will compare with it, either for inside or quitide walls.

In all these cases the darkness of the shades, of course, is determined by the quantity of coloring used. It is difficult to make rules, because tastes are different; it would be best to try experiments on a shingle and let it dry. We have been told that green must not be mixed with lime. The lime destroys the color, and the color has an effect on the whitewash, which makes it erack and peel. When walls have been badly smoked and you wish to have them takes it a fean white, it is well to squeeze indigo plentifully through a bag into the warry ou use, before it is stirred into the mixture. If a larger quantity than fire gallons be wanted, the same proportion about the appropriate of the same proportion about the observed.
