

SINN & SHERMAN

Number, gentle lady,
Slumber like the rose,
When the air of Heaven
Lulls it to repose.
Angel, have o'er thee,
Gently seal these eyes,
Wilt thy spirit gently
To the smiling skies.

VARIOUS ITEMS.

—Keep the eyes wide open before marriage, and half shut afterwards.

—If your knowledge is little, let not your words be many.

—Ground coffee is said to be an excellent disinfectant.

—Why is a dog lying with his nose to his tail, an emblem of economy? Because he makes both ends meet.

—“I am on the trail of a deer,” is a gentleman said when he trod on a lady’s dress.

—Lovers, like armies, generally get along quietly enough until they are engaged.

—Mrs. Partington says that she has bought a horse so spirited that he always goes off on a deer.

—Listen to a fatter who understands his trade, and then try to be what he says you are.

—A man advertises for “competent persons to undertake the sale of a new medicine,” and adds that “it will be profitable to undertakers!” No doubt of it.

—The radicals, who are so much food of the negro that the white man are the people spoken of in Scripture who “love darkness rather than light.”

—A Western editor thinks Hiram Power is a swindler, because he chiseled an unfortunate Greek girl out of a block of marble.

—The lawyer’s motto—be brief. The physician’s motto—be patient. The potter’s motto—beware. The type-setter’s motto—be composed.

—The easiest way to get a living, says a vagabond poet, is to sit on a gate and wait for good luck. In case good luck don’t come along, you are no worse off than you were before.

—Brownlow says Kentucky may “go to hell.” Can’t you give her a letter of introduction, Governor? It might have great weight with the cloven-footed radical below.—Nashville Examiner.

—Prentiss makes the following wicked lunge at the very underpinning of society. He says, “Tilting hoops enable the common people to see a great deal more of good society than they ever saw before.”

—There is something exquisite in the American’s reply to the European traveler, when he asked him whether he had just crossed the Alps: “Wal, now just call my attention to the fact, I guess I done pass right ground.”

—To cure horehound, take the white of two eggs, and beat them, two spoonfuls of white sugar; grate in a little nutmeg; then add a pint of lukewarm water. Repeat the prescription if necessary, and it will cure the most obstinate case in a short time.

—A man in the “loyal” State of Wisconsin, who had been in the army, brought home, among other trophies, a young negro. After keeping him at hard labor for some months his benefactor swapped him off for a dog.

—To obtain an electrical shock from a cat, place the left hand under the throat, and with the middle finger and thumb slightly press the bones of the animal’s shoulder; then, when the right hand is gently passed along the back, perceptible shocks of electricity will be felt in the left hand.

—A Republican in Maine, who had served out his time of thirty days in the Augusta jail, was asked when he came out how he liked it. “I had a bully time,” said he. “There were seventy-six inmates of the jail, and not a single Democrat amongst the lot.”

—At four or five darkness were passing an agricultural implement store on Bond street, yesterday, one of them, pointing to a cultivator, said, “A man kin jist as that thing and ride while he’s a plowin’.” “Golly,” replied another, “the d—n parcel was too sharp to tink o’ dat ‘tend de diggers was free”—Nashville Boner.

—An “Abolition” “united” the thrilling insertion that within a month after the opening of the New York Anti-Slavery Asylum, over fifteen hundred applications were made by wealthy parents for the adoption of their daughters, who had cultivated habits of intemperance from the use of wines and liquors at fashionable parties.

—In view of the fact that the Abolitionists in Congress have proposed some highly odd amendments to the Constitution, a factitious fellow in Kentucky offered the selected amendments to the consideration of the Constitution tinkerers:

—Every freedom shall have a bureau to himself, with a looking-glass on the top of the table.

—Every freed boy or girl shall have a sword.

—Every freed child shall have every thin fibres fit.

—White people, whether free or not, shall have their rights.

—Clothing of every color, except red,
