THE FUTURE AND THE PAST.

The heart is like a river, Where two currents flow—One to the Future leading,
One to the Long Ago.
On both the banks are roses,
On both the sun is cast,
But the current which is smoothest Flows ever to the past.

Upon this ebbing river
Our thoughts like vessels go—Some to the Future sailing, Some to the Long Ago.
Bringing at their returning, Hellas we dearly prize, Dreught from those distant islands Brought by youth's sunny skies.

and drive, and appear, at certain balls, parties, concerts, exactly as your friends do, or be voted bizarre, and out of the world altogether.
You my poor Jenny, who are by no means fond of dress, what would you do as a fashionable waiving place in the hottest days in August with five changes of toilet from morning to night, and a French lady's maid to tyrannize over you all the time into the bargain?
"Horror!" ejaculated Jenny.

"Balls that you must go to in spite of fatigue, parties that you must give in spite of the heat, calls that you must make on people whom you detest! Oh, Jenny, I should rather be at home with the butter and cheese if I were you."

Jenny was silent. Here was the dark side of the bright picture which she had never seen or dreamed of before.
"You love your husband, Jenny?" said her friend, after a time.

Notable Tributes to the Great Dead.

The London Standard pays the following glowing tribute to the memory of Robert E.
Lee:

Few indeed are there in Europe or in America so much of nature or so violent in particu-larship as to bear without regret that the illness of General Lee has terminated fatally. The world has lost one of its greatest men, his profusion one of its noblest ornaments, his unhappy country her foremost citizen. It is impossible to think of the departed hero without regretful feelings, not only for the loss that Virginia and the South have sustained, not only for the removal of one whose example is as pure and as noble as any that history record, but for the circumstances under which such a man has closed a life so illustrious and so unfortunate. Most of General Lee's comrades and intimate associates were happy in the time and in the occasion of their deaths—happy in dying a soldier's death, while yet there was hope for their cause, and in escaping the bitter fate which awaited the "lost" and greatest of them all. Sidney Johnston, the summander of the Western armies, fell in a
