I could bear this no longer. I rose and picked no the striv litter about the room to They I went to the window, peering anxiously through the gloom, but seeing nothing of my loy, my heart became terribly heavy;

this aspense was unbearable. Hastily throw-ing a think over my head, I ran into Mrs. Potter's. 'Have you seen Eddie?" was the question

"Have you seen Harrs ?"
"He was over here at half-past two; be and Eddie went to Jose Gray's, I think—"
What she thought I never knew, for at that moment the door flew open and Eddie rushed in breathest, sertaming, "Oh, mother, mother! Harrs Loring is drowned! We were slidif the mill pord and there was a hole in with snow on it, and Harry didn't see 'Hush, Eddie." said his mother, looking at poor chied."

But I never moved, but sat gazing with wide openeves upon an awful picture. A co'd, grav afternoon, a pond, a little figure well known to me auddenly disappeared thro the trevelerous ice, down, down, the little hand grasping at cruel weeds, the sweet mouth full of water. And those wicked, sinful words more.

A pleasant feeling of warmth, a languld sense pervaided my whole system. I opened my eyes and glanced around the room. A strange woman by the fire; at the foot of the bed my husband, with his hards over his eyes. I tried to think where I was and what had happened, but in vain. Then my attention was arrested by a little figure in a red flaunet night-dress cuddled up in a big chair—my listry! Then it all flashed across my mind, leat up straight in bed, and said, faintly:

liarry! Then it all flashed across my mind, i ant up straight in bed, and said, faintly:
"Why? What is it?"
"You must not laik—lie-down. Oh, dar-ling!" and the strong man weptlike a child. And the little figure came and jumped on my led, and putting his arms around my neck, cried too. And I, puzzled to know what is all meant, cried also. The strange figure came and took liarry away, saving, be careful now, Mr. Luring, everything depends upon quiet."

"Tell me all now," said I, "I must know, I had such a, horrible feeling. Ob, Harold! I dreamed flirry was drowned!"

His face grew white. He was near death. Dr. Hopper and came right up. There was but a spark of life, but we succeeded at last."
"How many days ago was it, Harold?"
"Seven weeks ago, yesterday," said be, with the march of improvement.

"You have been very sick with brain fever, possessed by itev. Dr. Unappeals, the following despointed of ever seeing you conscious. You would call yourself all kinds of manner; you would call yourself all kinds of manner; you would say "Harry is drowned, and I made him drown himself." Last night Dr. Hopper haid the crists is at thand; if you live through the night you will get well. Oh, Ella, I am any thinkful you are spared to me." "I have been week and sinful, Harold," and then told him all, not keeping back anything."

that was soon recovered. For a long time I could not bear Harry out of my sight. It seemed as it I roudd not do half enough to atone for my wicked conduct. The thought makes me shudder now—if it had been that Harry had never come back to me, and that the last words had heard from his mother's lips were so unkind. I have had three children since and not one of them has ever received a trues of hasty word from me. Oftentimes my pistince is severely tried, but one thought of that horrible death, to which Harry came so near, drives the deson nawy.

Indie death, to which Harry came so hear, drives the design away.

Mothers, bear patiently with those little insport ones. Are there not many whole eyes, the more than a simple story, are filled with latter towns at the recollection of the lopkind words and even blows to little children Laid away forever, who would give all their worlds.
