The truth is, the poor, diseased body, called the Radical party, has a fatal malady upon i., which must, in the unture of the case, ere long, Radical journals see the hand-writing on the wall, and are utterly bewildered to know how to parry the blows dealt on all sides at the rotten Radical fabric. In point of fact, the know not which way to turn, or what under heaven to do, to prop up a crambling party, and save it from the inevitable approaching crash. Alarm is manifest in all they say about the administration they have conjured up and put into power, and in speaking of the status and prospects of their party, sometimes they break ont in undisguised hostility, and lash the administration and party leaders without mercy, charging them with having brought rule upon the party-the highest commet known to them. Sometimes they give advice, and declare that unless it is followed, all will be lost. Sometimes they point out what they mildlr call "mistakes," think they ought to be rectified, but endeavor to persuade their downcast brethren, that there is no cause for alarm, that everything is bright and beautiful just behind the cloud, while, at the same time, they are almost pulsied with apprehension and fear, acting upon the theory that, for party purpo ses, the "false face must hide what the false heart doth know."
