The New Church Organ.

BY WILLIAM M. CARLETON. They've got a bran new organ, Sue, For all their fues and search; They've done just as they said they'd do, And fetched it into church.

They're bound the critter shall be seen, And on the preacher's right They're hoisled up their new machine In everyhody's sight.
They've got a chorister and choir,
Au'n my voice and vote;
For it never was my desire

To praise the Lord by note.

I've been a sister good and frus
For fire and thirty year;
I've done what seemed my part to do,
Au' prayed my doty clear;
I've sung the bymns both slow and quick,
Just as the preacher read,
And twice when Deacon Tubbs was sick,
I took the fork and led!
And now their bold, new-fangled ways
Is comin' all about;
And I, right tu my latter days,
An fairly crowded out. Am fairly crowded out.

To-day the preacher, good old dear, With tears all in his eyes, Read — "I can read my title clear To "maneions in the skies" — I al'ay sliked that blessed by mn-

I all as liked that blessed hymn— I a pose! all as will; It somehow gratifies my whim, In good old Ortonville; But when the choir got up to sing, I couldn't catch a word; They sing the most dog-gonest thing A body ever heard. plete stock of Foreign and Domestic Wines

Some wordly chaps were standin' near, And when I wed them grin, I bid farewell to every fear, And holdly waded in. And boildy water in.
I thought I'd chase their tune along,
And tried with all my might;
But though my voice is good and strong,
I couldn't steer it right;
When they was high, then I was low,
An' also contractwise;

And I too fast, or they too slow, To "mansions in the skies." An' after every verse, you know, They played a little time I did nt understand, and so, I started in too ason. I jittle d in pretty middlin' high, I fetched a loste time.

I fetched a lusty tone, But, oh, alas ! I found that I Was singer there alone! They houghed a little, I am told, But I had done my best; And not a wave of trouble rolled. Across my peaceful breast.

And sister Brown —I could but look—
She sits right in front of me;
She never was no singing-booky.
An' never ought to be:
But then she at aya tried to do
The best she could she said,
She understood the time, right through,
And kept it in her head:
But when she tried this mornin', oh. But when she tried this mornin', oh, I had to laugh, or cough! It kept her head a bobbin' so,

It e en a most come off! An' Deacon Tubbs-he all broke down, An' Dearon Tubbs—he ail broke down,
As one might well suppose:
He took one look at sister Brown,
And meekly scratched his nose.
He looked his hymn book thro' and thro'
And laid it on the seat,
And then a pensive sigh he drew,
And looked completely teat.
And when they took another bout,
He dight teven use;
But drawed his red bandanner out,
And wind his weeping eyes.

I've been a eister good an' true, For five and thirty year; I've done what seemed my part to do, An prayed my duty clear; But death will stop my voice, I know, For he is on my track; And some day I to church will go,

And never more come back

We have told him about our Katie, but we wa'n't expectin' you till to-morrow night, so they have gone over to town to make a call, and now hurry to bed dear, and get your 'beauty-sleep', and be up bright and early to surprise them in the morning. Woo'i John open his eyes, for I shan't let him know you are here till he sees you at breakfast."

morning. Won't John open his eyes, for shan't let him know you are bere till he sees you at breakfast."

So good-nights were exchanged and Katle retired, to dream of John's handsome friend.

Now, as is the way of many old country houses of the last century, the dwelling of uncle Joe has a large, spacious chamber, on one side of which, bed-rooms are built, and the rest, raftered and roomy, makers a magnificent ventilitation for the ancient abode. In one of the aforesaid bed-rooms sipet the pide, Katle.

Soundly and awestly she slumbered, and when the plotious morning sun kinsed her eys-lida, she sprang lightly from her downy pillows, prepared to attire berself most be witchingly in the pretty buff cambric, trimmed so charpingly with blue.

"What a pily I haven't my own beautiful halryet," sighed Katle, as she lared, her, face in the pare, sweet water from the mendous eprings. 19-0, that horrid fever I it made such sad harpe with my looks;" and thus soilloquings, Katle tarned to get the "stunffed possible of the soil of the what shall you, "cried halte, searching up and down, hither and thither, validy for the missing head gear.

"She remembered taking it off, just before retiring, and laying it at the head of the bed on a chair, and now it was certainly nowhere in the room.

"What will become of me," sighed Katle, half crying, "ny own head looks just like little Shocks, aunt Polly's little lap-dog."

At this juncture aunt Polly appeared on the scene, with the announcement that the boys were up and breakfast was ready.

Katie's dolorous plight was soon made known, and the search renewed by both with rigor, but not a vestige of the missing article could be discovered.

Weary with looking and waiting, Katle, after a good cry, and at aunt Polly's earnest solicitation, concented to brush up her soft misty licitation, consented to brush up her soft misty locks into pretty rings and tendrils, about neak and brow, and appear upon the scene.

"Say not a word about it, dear," said sunt

Polly, scothingly, "and they'll think it a new Polif, scothingly, "and they'll think it a new style."

So Katie made her debut, and was introduced to John's friend, and John, "contrary to natur," as aunt Polif declared, 'didn's teaso or run her a bit." There happened thereafter, in the course of human events, sundry walks, rides, pie-nics, excursions, etc., in all of which llarry Lane, the friend aforesaid, and Katle, seemed to pair off naturally together, and so, ere the summer waned, they had determined to brave the shoals and quickands on the treacherous sea of matrimony.

"Katle shall be married here, at the old homestead, where her ma was born," said kind aunt Polly, and so there was slaughtering of the feathered creation, and vigorous beating of fresh eggs, and augar, and golden cream, and amony flour.

cream, and snowy flour.
"And we'll have a big dance in the chamber," said John.

"You'll have to have a new floor in then." replied uncle Joe; and so a cappenter was sent for with dispatch, and the Bose, old time-stained boards were soon in process of tearing up, to make room for the smoothest of white. ne floors, for a grand dance at Katie's wed-pine noors, for a grand dance at Katle's wedding.

And what met the astonished eyes of chela Joe, as he lifted the boards contigued's to Katle's chamber, from their restings place? Why, the cosiest family of little rats, saungly ensconned in what was once Katle's waterfall, now carefully pulled to peices and arridged' into a comfortable nest.

Uncle Joe had been warned by annt Polly, on the morning of Katle's mysterious. loss, to never mention it to the boys, "for you see if John gets wind of it shall never hear the less of it," said sympathiting aunt Polly. But the discovery was too good to be kept secret.

Katle was quickly sammoned, and her irrepressible screams of laughter soon brought.

Katie was quickly summoned, and her irrepressible screams of laughter soon brought

"Whiskey Bas Used Bin Ur."—There is scarcely a community or a neighborhood from Maine to Oriegon, where this asying is not used almost every day in the year, and altogether too truly. A subject of this kind is to be found in almost every town. The merchant has failed, and whiskey has done it. The lawyer with brilliant talents and a large business has fallen below the range of respectability and confidence: whiskey was the cause. The politicam with bright prospects before him has played out, and the account is charged to whiskey. The judge of talent, age and respectability, is the subject of private and neighborhood talk. His enemies point with derision, and his friends hang their heads in shame, and whiskey has done it. That kind hearted neighbor and hard working man has become a pest in society and a trouble to his family. Whiskey has best him Whiskey will beat any man living, and that is just what it is made for. A Pipe is a Powder Room.—The Hartford Times says:—A singular occurrence is told unconcerning a man at the powder mills. Of course the utmost precautions are used by the employers—woodcu shore, and no smoking or matches are sillowed on the premises. This man, it seems, had been smoking; going into an apartment where there were a large number of open barrels of powder—it is said 100—waiting to be headed, and sat down on the wite, auch Polly.

Every summer comes here to rusticate, from the pent city's noise and heat, pretty Kate M., acunt Polly's orphen neice. Last June, as usual, tourd Katie, bag and baggage, en route for uncle Jue's, where she arrived on time and in good order.

"As well out of the world as out of the fashion, under," laughed Katie, and then, almost with a sob, "don't you know, dear under, it isn't for Lathion I wear this at all, for last autumn, after leaving here, I lost all my own hair with the fever I wrote you about, and this is all talse—a miserable stuffed protuberance, for mine is only just long enough now to tuck under the edges of this cheat."
