Consistency.

Speaking of confistency the Montgomery (Ala.) Daily Advertiser says: "The nomination of Horace Greeley may have been startling and all that. It was so to us. But why not support on the same platform one honest and competent Republican as soon as any other ? If we go back beyond the events of twelve months, it would be impossible for Mr Voorbees to find any ground for wishing to see Judge Davis President of the United States ! Mr. Greeley is as thoroughly pronounced a Reformer as Judge Davis.

We now agree or support Greeley as we would have supported Judge Davis had he received the nomination, not because we did not differ with either of these persons ten years ago, or two years but because the duties and interests of true patriotism have brought us ogether at last on a common basis of action in a struggle for the liberties of the country.

The true question is not what what was Mr. Greeley's opinion ten, or even two years ago, but what are his epinions now on -vital ques-tions. Had Mr. Adams been nominated the same conditions would have surpevened precisely. Had Judge Davis been nominated the problem must necessarily have been solved in the same manner. How would it have been solved in each case? It could only have been determined in one way. First by the same identical platform in which the past personality of the candidate would have been absorbed and lost; and, second, by the letter of the candidate accepting the nomination and declaring a concurrence with the resolutions of the Con-Academy, besides two or three excellent Pri vention. Neither Mr. Adams nor Judge Davis rould possibly have written a more thorough letter of acceptance and platform identifica-

This is a sough and sensible view. Ther are those who preferred Judge Davis or Mr. Adams to Horace Greeley, but they would have had the same obstacles to encounter to apport either. If any have made rash promises, let them be recalled, and let us all unite in support of the nomines of the Baltimore Convention. That is the way to succeed. In union there is strength.

They then adjourned. The boliers from these, about ten in sumber, then assembled in a private room in the city, and after making a platform, nominated Wm. S. Groesbeck, of Ohio, for President, and Frederick Law Olmstend, of New York, for Vice President. These are the candidates of the Free Traders, as thus nominated. Our Schools.

This has been examination week and the ung ladies and gentlemen have had a busy me in undergoing the annual test while pre-home, and of being once more at the old bomstead, and of spending the vacation among he therished friends of their youth. They have parted for a time, some, perhaps, forever, and the kind "good-bye" has been given. These may now indulge in imagination, reve in the realms of fancy, and from the book of Nature learn lessons of wisdem that are not taught in the books of men. They can inhale he pure air of the country and enjoy the coo shade that surrounds the paternal mansion, instead of being tied down to the classic page during the sultry hours of noon. This is relief from toll, but it will soon pass, as will the years of study, and the youth and maiden havegrown to manhood and womanhood, and then begins the "Battle of Life." How to fight it well is the great lesson to learn-they cannot prepare too well for the hard struggle, and the Philosophy learned in the schools must be practised by those who are so soon to enter the arena. If they have found the Hill of Science bard to climb they will find still greater difficulties in the journey that lies before them-that superficiality is not the education which will make the rough ways smooth-bu thoroughness is the panoply which must cover all-and they must remember the counsel of Professor and Tutor, treasuring up in the storehouse of knowledge that good advice which will lead them safely to the goal. STICKING TYPE FOR THE OLD WHITE HAT.—

On Monday two of the compositors employed on the New York Albion agreed to set one thousand ems of type (solid hereier, 284 ems wide) for the purpose of deciding which candidate they would support in the corong presidential campaign. One of them, Harry B. Henon, is a strong Greeley man, while the other, W. J. Thompson, is a supporter of Grant. The conditions were that the man who lost should become a supporter of the Other's candidate. The contest commenced at one o'clock. Henon set his thousand ems in forty six minutes. Thompson coming to the mark two minutes later. Thompson says the old white hat is always in luck.
