From the Boston-Chronicle.

It is useful, amusing and instructive for a people who value their national institutions, to carry back their minds occawhich they were obtained.

In the debates in the Massachusetts convention, on the adoption of our National Constitution, from page 61 to 69, there is some choice rending, that would not come amiss to the citizens of this state at this particular time.

On the 17th and 18th January, 1788, we had the unreserved and unequivocal testimony of a King, a Gorham, a Dana, a Dawes, a Gore, a Parsons and a John and acquitted by a jury of his country, of of the Fideral Constitution, which directs and the evidences adduced against him, by no states, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole numbers of free persons three fif he of all other persons."

Mr. King says this article was adopted because it was the language of all Ameri.

Mr. Girham, thought the proposed section mich in favor of Massachusetts. Messrs Parsons, Gore, and Join C. Jones, spoke of the advantage in the Nor. thern States this rule of appointment gave to them-

The Hon. Judge Dana expatiated twice on the subject.

But, above all, the first paragraph of the speech of Col, Dawes on this occasion, is worthy of particular attention.

Mr. Dawessaid he was sorry to hear so many objections raised against the paragraph under censideration. He thought Schr. Betsy, Low, them wholly missing ded; that the black inhabitants de the fourteen States must be considered either as slaves and so much property, or in the character of so many free men; if the former why should they; not be wholly represented? Our own state laws and constitution would lead us to consider those blacks as Free men and so indeed would our cwn ideas of natural justice.
