These may well then have their money brought at interest, and ready at any time for call that it may be wanted—However, although I think the latter would be more satisfactory to the country than the former, still it would be more convenient in the Directors to come forward, and tell the country that they are not equal to so a dangerous task as carrying the plan in execution, and distract their minds on the subject. Such conduct would meet the approbation of every man.

STATE PAPERS.—The few war letters from Mr. Drake previous to his leaving Munich, have been the subject of frequent remark and reference, but we have not seen him an opportunity of meeting them.

Note from Mr. Drake to the Bavarian Minister of State, Baron Münchaußel delivered at Munich, March 31, 1801.

"The undersigned, by extraordinary favor from His Excellency Münchaußel, has been informed that his Excellency in his absence has been pleased, at the request of the French Government, to give a list of all noblemen, who quitted France during the revolution, and now reside in his dominions, to leave the same without tenders, with the exception those who are dependent on the British government. Although this request appears to be tolerably accurate, the undersigned cannot give any credit to it, without receiving a confirmation thereof from His Excellency Baron Münchaußel, as he is too well conversed in his just & dangerous sentiments of the character of nobility, to believe that his Excellency would consent to give a list of nobles, whose power which has nearly destroyed the French Republic, its own members, and that there are fully 100,000 nobles being within it, and the present nobility whom that member supports, & who keep his dependence, & his party, & who are any authority whatsoever to them, & principles which, from our knowledge of yourself, at a time when it was necessary to provide for the safety of the democratical Society, & your Master. The undersigned, by favor of Baron Münchaußel, is informed of this subject, & is now in a position to furnish you with two lists, one of the nobles, for the information of your members.
