

has pressed a reparation for wrongs—and when equivocation has been substituted for the usual magnanimity of Spain, he has delivered his ultimatum. These we apprehend are the facts.

We suspect that the propositions have been the cause of his ultimatum.

From the terms of the third article of the convention, of which we gave an abstract in a preceding number it appears to us that the first proposition is in the extreme of absurdity—for the article says that "the commissioners shall meet at Madrid, where, within the term of 18 months (to be reckoned from the day on which they assemble) they shall receive all claims, &c."

Now eighteen months alone would be sufficient to convey and receive information from any part of the Spanish colonies; and before the meeting six months would expire at least in addition thereto, so that if the propositions are authentic, as we are willing to believe, the government of Spain must be intent not only to deny us justice for the past, but to commit wanton and aggravated aggression.

The second proposition partakes of the same character; it has reference to the sixth article of the convention.

This article is of the declaratory character, by which it is provided that neither the demand of compensation on one hand, nor the omission to demand on the other, shall be considered as invalidating nor recognizing claims which may thereafter be made and discussed.

Here was a liberal suspension of claims, which Spain might postpone to a period more favorable to her views of justice; when she might obtain from France a compensation for the loss to which she was exposed by the abuse of French cruisers and agents. But to this liberality it seems the court of Spain is not disposed to listen—and the only reason for such gross conduct we are informed is, that "our relations are changed with Spain since the acquisition of Louisiana."

How are our relations changed? The territory did not belong to Spain! How are our relations changed? Justice and reparation have not been done for the insults committed by the Spanish intendant!—How are our relations changed? Spain has not made reparation for the aggression committed by her cruisers! Is it because her agents or subjects have done us wrong, and we have relied upon Spanish magnanimity. According to a federal member of the senate—"Spain has ranked high for good faith, and in my opinion higher than any nation in Europe. Slow to promise she has always fulfilled her agreements with honor, according to the spirit, without cavilling about the words of treaties."

But it seems Spain has departed from this high character, and she has become a caviller about words, she has called upon us to relinquish totally, a right of which we have voluntarily suspended the litigation; and she has denied us a restitution of property, and a reparation for wrong, under this disgraceful cavil.

But the third proposition contains perhaps the point of the epigram—and in the same spirit it demands that to be undone which is not done at all.

The act alluded to was passed on the 24th February last, and forms the XIII. chapter of the laws of last session, page 26. It is the act for laying duties on imports and tonnage in the territory ceded by France.

To repeal this act would be to abandon the whole of the revenue law of the United States now established in that territory; a circumstance that proves the proposition to be very improperly translated, or that the writer did not understand the force of the proposition.

COMMUNICATION.
Departed this life, on Sunday evening, Mr. CALEB FOSTER, cut nail manufacturer. He had been ill some time but would not consent to be removed from where he had his works, and where he was found in a lone house, without any person having been present when he died. A friend went to see him: found him lying against the bed with his feet on the floor. The suddenness of the fright which his shocking appearance created, deprived him for a moment of his senses—on coming to he called some persons together & a corner's body was summoned, which sat on the body & brought in a verdict "died of a natural death for the want of assistance."

A serious caution to the friends of all sick persons, not to leave them in a lone house without some attendance.

It is submitted to the board of health of Philadelphia, whether the above list of interments affords just grounds for the report lately published in their city, of the unhealthiness of Baltimore; and whether any part of the Union, containing the same number of inhabitants, possess, at this season, a greater degree of health. From Bryden's Marine List.

September 24.
A Pilot Boat that came up this morning reports 7 ships in the bay, amongst which are, the Fame from Liverpool, Phoenix from Jamaica, two Bremen ships, the others unknown.

Charleston, September 13.
The schooner Favorite, captain Culley, from Baltimore for this port, with a cargo of corn, was upset off Cape Roman, in the late gale, on Saturday evening, about 8 o'clock, and immediately went down. There were on board at the time captain Culley, his mate, and three seamen—Mr. and Mrs. Groves, and a Mr. Stewart, passengers, and a negro fellow, said to be the property of Mr. Wescott, Mr. Groves, and a seaman by the name of Wallace, caught hold of a hercoop, the other persons on board, it is believed, went down with the vessel. Wallace kept his hold on the hercoop about four hours, when exhausted, he fell off and was drowned. Mr. Groves was then left alone, and remained in this situation until Sunday evening, 6 o'clock, (22 hours) when he was fortunately picked up by captain Smith, of the Venus, from New York.

The sloop Ranger, captain Moses Andrews, sailed from Charleston for Nassau, (N. P.) on the 2d instant. On the 6th, being in lat. 28, 30, on the outside of the gully, experienced a storm so severe that it was found necessary to lie to under a balanced mainsail; unable to bear this, was obliged to lie to under bare poles. In the course of the day a boat was carried away from the stern; and between 10 and 11 o'clock P. M. the vessel shipped a sea, which threw her on her beam ends, broke and carried overboard the boom, with two of the hards (who held by the pump spear till it gave way); but, happily, got in again—swept away the binnacle, tore the boat from her lashings on the main deck hercoops, water casks, flying jib, and jibboom, considerably injured the rudder, carried away the larboard shrouds, and shifted the cargo. The vessel lying on her beam ends, half full of water, and still making water fast, made it indispensably necessary to cut away and clear the wreck. The sudden overturning of the vessel having put out the lights, rendered the situation of all on board truly dismal. The vessel being almost sunk, and a frightful sea dashing over her, presented no prospect but that of momentarily going to the bottom. Flint and steel were of no use with wet tinder, but some powder being at length found, a light was procured. Now able to see the real situation of things, the hands were employed in baling out the cabin with a couple of b's out kegs (every thing else that could serve this purpose having been washed overboard) while the pump was mending, which occupied several hours. About day light the pump being finished, and having begun to work, soon freed the vessel from water, and the persons on board in some degree, from their apprehensions of perishing. On the 8th, the storm having abated, and a fair wind blowing from the S E stood for Charleston, under a foresail; and in the course of the next day, rigged a square sail.
