Latest Foreign Intelligence. AN ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE LOUIS XVIII.

[Concluded from yesterday's American]

On the morning of the 24th, Coulon carried the pacquet and the bottle to M. de Milleville, who went instantly to Lazienky, and communicated the whole to the count d'Avaray. This nobleman having had a conversation in the evening with the President de Hoym, wrote to him, requesting an interview. M. de Heym repaired at ten in the morning, to the house of the Count d'Avaray, who | de l'Isle, in analyzing the articles concommunicated to him the declaration of sidered as auspices, and given up by Coulon and shewed him the pacquet and . Coulon. the bottle. The Count d'Avaray requested the President de Hoym to sign an attestation of the communication made | jection to give him immediate satisfacto him. M. d'Avaray, who had put his seal on the articles committed to him by M de Millevile, asked M de Hoym | measures, the count de i'Isle relies with to do the same. M de Hoym who had I confidence on the exections of the Preat first yielded to the reasons which M | sident de Hoym, for the safety of those d'Avaray gave for indentifying the suspected articles, till they should be submitted to a chemical analysis, by some professional men, then refused to affix his seal, he would not even accompany him to the Archbishop of Rheims, whose house was close by M d'Avaray's. On leaving him, he renewed his assurances of the respect and devotion he entertained for the person of the King and his august family-and it was agreed, that the Count de Avaray should transmit to M de Hoym such ultimate details as might appear necessary to enable him to discover the criminals.

The Marquis of Bonney, an efficer of the gardes du corps, honored with the King's confidence, and entrusted with his correspondence, was employed by Md'Avaray to transmit to M de Hoym, the particulars requested.

To supply as much as possible the want of the Count de Hoym, the Count d'Avaray went to the house of the Archbishop of Rheims, who had been previously informed of the affair, and requested him to affix his seal, which he did.

The King had fixed his departure for the next day, and the Count d'Avaray thought it time to inform his Majesty of the whole affair, that he might act in future by his orders. The King discovered on this occasion a warm solicitude for his family and faithful servants; but in respect to himself, the same screnity he has discovered in every similar occasion. His Majesty wrote to the President de Hoym the following letter:-

SIR-I have received information of a plot entertained against my life. If none but myself was simed at-if mortal weapons were the means, accustomed as you know me to be to such threats, I would pay them little attention; but my wife, my uephew, my neice, my faithful servants, are likewise threatened with poison, and I should betray my most sacred duties if I despised this danger. Perhaps I am beset with russians, perhaps it is only a base imposition. In either case I find it necessary to confer with you. I beg of you to come this evening, when I shall have the additional satisfaction of assuring you, &c.

The Count d'Avaray did not find M de Horm at home, and had not an opportunity of giving him the King's letters, till nine o'clock at night. M de Hoym replied verbally, that he should have the honor to send an answer to M the Count de l'Isle, and that next day he would attend his commands. He added, that every thing was in the hands of the police, and should be followed up with activity .- M d'Avaray expressed his surprize that Coulon had not yet been apprehended, whose tour was perfectly well known, as it was important that he should be strictly examined, whether his declaration was true, or whether he was an impostor-The 23d July, the day fixed for the departure of the King, arrived. No answer from M de Hoym having been received by his Majasty, he was obliged to postpone his journey, and charged the Count d'Avaray, to communicate the affair to M the Duke d'Angouleme, requesting him not to apprise Madame. The count d'Avaray gave a detailed account of the affair to the Dake d'Angouleme in présence of the Count de la Chapelle, whom the King was to leave at Warsaw, charged with special powers for the further investigation of this af-

The Count d'Avaray transmitted to M de Hoym the supplementary declaration made by Coulon, on the 34th in the evening.

The answer of M de Hoym arrived on the morning of the 25th. It stated " That the nature of his duties did not permit him to perform more than a merely passive part in such an affair, and that he had given the police the necessary justructions."

The King having no longer any hope of seeing M'de Hoym, and of commu nicating verbally with him, thought it time to make a demand in form, which he did in the following terms:

answer of the President de Hoym to his Hair, and that the business belongs to letter of the 24th of July, in which he special police of the city, M. the promised to wait on him. He relies too | Count l'Isle acdfaises, with the same much on the friendly solicitude of his Prussian Msjesty towards him and hie disequently directed the count d'Avaray CES CURRENT, and all other kinds of family, and on the sentiments of per- putinto his hands a packet containing JOBPRINTING done at this office, with sonal attachment of which the President | it atticles hitherto considered as suspineatness and dispatch, and on ressonable de Hoym has given so many proofs, not thus; but which the report made and terms.—One Pauss is solely devoted to to be convinced of the activity with sined this day by the medical men which those measures will be carried 'I (which report the count d'Ayaray is also into execution, that were ordered in consequence of the declaration inaile by the person called Coulon. The Court de l'Isle bad expected that the Presi !ent de Hoym would have come on his invitation, but finding from his letter that he would not come to Lazinky, he finds it necessary to make the following demanus. 1. That the person called Coulon, along with his wife, be secured, in order that they may undergo, as soon as possible, the necessary examination.

2 That there be immediately nominated professional men to assist and cooperate with the Physician of the Count

M the Count de l'Isle hopes that the President de Hoym will have no objection in those several respects.

Whatever may be the result of those dear and precious objects which he leaves here under the protection of mis Prussian Majesty.

The Duke de Pienne, charged by his Majesty to carry this to M D'Hoym, returned with the answer, "that the police was apprized of the whole affar. and that it would do its duty." This might be satisfactory in regard to Coulon, but was by no means an answer to the demand made of professional people to analyze the articles in question. It was new six in the evening, and the King's note had been sent at two in the afterneon. Notwithstanding the danger of a delay, which might alter the nature of the articles contained in the picket, the King was under the necessity of waiting till next day for the answer of the Government.

During this interval count d'Avaray charged M de Fairre, the King's Physician, to procuree the assistance of two physicians and an apathecary to make an analysis of the articles delivered by

On the 26.h at eight in the morning, the King received an answer from M de Hoym. It stated " that the nomination of a commission for the analysis demanded, depended neither on him nor the Police; that it could only take place subsequently to a crimical process already begun; that the person of Cou-Ion could not be secured, because the laws of the realm did not permit his imprisonment so long that he was not charged with any crime."

Without losing a moment, the Count de Avaray, accompanied by the Duko de Pienne and the king's physician, went to Dr. Gagatkiewicz, one of the most distinguished physicians at Warsaw, for his skill and moral character-There, in the presence of Dr. Bergenzoni and M Gudeit, apothecary to the Count d'Avaray broke open the seals affixed to the packet by him and tha Archbishop of Rheims, took out one of the three carrots and submitted it to the medical men present. The opening made at one of the extremities was pasted over with a clammy substance, of a color resembling, in some degree, that of peas. M Gudeit opened it. When they had finished their chemical operations, they drew up a proces verbal, and delivered, in the mean time to M d'Avaray, the foilowing attestation :-" After several chemical experiments made on the mass found in the ins de of a carrot which was delivered to us, it appears beyond a doubt that this mass is a poison of arsenic, consisting of a mixture of three sorts of arsenicwhite, rellow and red, as shall be afterwards more particularly stated. Signed. Valentine Gagaikieweiz, doctor in medicine.-Gudeit, apothecary. " Dr. Bergenzoni being obliged to attend a very pressing engagement, only signed the process verbal."

Warsow, July 26, 1804. The bottle delivered to Coulon by, the two strangers, only contained a spiritous

The carrot on which the experiment had been made, was returned into the packet, and again scaled with the scal of the Duke de Pienne with that of the Count d'Avaray, and those of the prolessional men present. The same precaution was observed with respect to the other two untouched carrots and the bottle of spirits.

Furnished with the certificate of, the medical men respecting the existence and nature of the poison, the king addressed the following note to the president de Tilly, chief of the special police of the city, to whom M de Hoym, alleging his incompetency, had recommended the allair:

" M. the Count de l'Isle was obliged, according to the forms pointed out to him, and which he had hitherto constantly followed, to address the president de Hoym, as chief of the province, for the prosecution of the attempt denounced by the said Coulone But Mathe president de Hoym, by his letter of the 23d, recoived this mothing, having declared The Count de l'Isle has received the limitels incompesent to judge, of this doudence the president de Tilly. He
