MONEY.
A PERSON, not immediately engaged in business, and having a few hundred dollars by him, would be glad to employ them in any manner where he could find his interest so turned—he would have no objection in some one in a speculation in a small shipment to the West Indies, and from having some knowledge of those parts, and corresponding there, could probably point out a market and articles, where some advantage might be made. The intent of the advertiser is merely to employ a small sum where he can derive a benefit from it. Any one inclined to apply to this seriously, will address a line for W. W. to be left at this office, with name and abode, which will be attended to and an interview appointed.

JACOB & WM. NORRIS,
MAY 24 d4t

The subscriber
RESPECTFULLY informs the public, that he has opened his office in the house lately occupied by William Russell, eq. now deceased in Bank-street, where he will give particular attendance for the transaction of all business in the department of a justice of the peace. He hopes that a liberal and humane public will not refuse a portion of its patronage to a man whose only object is the support of a numerous and indigent family, and at the same time to render such services to his fellow citizens as his limited talents will enable him to perform. To a feeling mind it will suffice to say, that his own labor is now his only resource in the evening of life; and that to the encouragement of a discerning and charitable public, he must be indebted for that subsistence which he once enjoyed in abundance, but of which misfortune has lately bereaved him.
