COMMUNICATION.

A subscriber to the Baltimore General Dispensary is concerned to observe, that the Solicitors for collecting the subscriptions to that excellent inflitution have not yet engaged in a business which would confer upon them much honor. When they reflect that the Dispensary has been the means of either curing or relieving upwards of eieven hundred indigent fick people, in the course of the last year, they are certainly furnished with a powersul motive to be unwearied in their exertions. The community mult be satisfied that fo small a sum as is required cannot be applied to a more charitable purpose.
