THE above work has been for some time in the press, and is in considerable demand, and will be published with all possible expedition.

It is a treatise which has long been established, that the knowledge of the laws of a country is the foundation of a citizen's rights and duties. For the purpose of the law, as admitted as a plea, laws would be without force, and consequently ineffectual. As it is out of the power of our government to promulgate its laws in such a way as to communicate them to every individual of the community, it is necessary for every man to furnish himself with the means of information to a degree sufficient to enable him to discharge the duties of his station as a citizen of a free State. This is what he owes to his country. To himself he owes more. It is every man's duty to be acquainted with the laws of his own government sufficiently to enable him to avoid the shoals and quicksands of legal error, and which ignorance of the law might throw him, and occasion the wreck of his fortune, and, perhaps, of his health and life. It is not only every man's duty, but it is every man's interest, to endeavor to understand enough of the acts of assembly and the terms and proceedings in the administration of justice, to enable him to give his own testimony in a proper manner, and to be able to recover his rights, and to be able to know the relative merits of his own cause.

The above work is an attempt to convey to the people of Maryland, in as concise a manner as possible, current knowledge of the positions of their acts of assembly which are of such nature as to be known and understood by the citizens of the State. It is a digest of the laws of Maryland, which more than any other law in the common tract of the country, will be of the most use to the people. It is not only every man's duty, but it is every man's interest, to endeavor to understand enough of the acts of assembly and the terms and proceedings in the administration of justice, to enable him to give his own testimony in a proper manner, and to be able to recover his rights, and to be able to know the relative merits of his own cause.

It has often been contended that in a free government every citizen has a right to participate equally in the offices of the State. To this proposition I have always assented; but at the same time I have uniformly thought there was another right not altogether unimportant; which is, that the community have a right to expect that every citizen should be qualified to discharge his duty. There are two rights which should go hand in hand. There is no office in the gift of our State executive of more importance or which may be more easily abused than that of a Justice of the Peace, and it is not only requisite a man of strong and good sense to fill it properly, but one who is well acquainted with the fundamental principles of law in general, and with our local laws in particular. A knowledge of the latter is some degree, in fact, indispensably requisite. But as Justice of the Peace is generally and very properly appointed from among the honest and independent part of the citizens of the several counties, who, though they have been trained to other pursuits in common, but who, nevertheless, have a sound understanding, it is to be expected that they can do justice into the large quarto volumes of Kelly's compilation and drag thence the path and marrow of the acts of assembly, and at the same time learn the form and manner of doing innumerable precedents required by their official duty. Hence the great necessity for a work embracing all these particulars in a small compass, to assist in forming a complete and accurate knowledge.

The duties of Justice of the Peace are of such a nature, and as every man is liable to serve the public in that capacity, that the knowledge will render the books of general utility.

Although I have not personally dwelt upon the advantages and merits of this work, I have no doubt, however, that it will be found to be a most useful and necessary addition to the library of every citizen of Maryland. I have no doubt, however, that it will be found to be a most useful and necessary addition to the library of every citizen of Maryland. I have no doubt, however, that it will be found to be a most useful and necessary addition to the library of every citizen of Maryland.

The following letter from John B. Colvin, Esq., to Philip Moore, Esq., dated in Baltimore, the 14th of February, 1850.

Dear Sir,

I have received your letter of the 14th inst., and in reply to inform you, in which you inform me that you have a copy of the laws of Maryland which more than any other law in the common tract of the country, will be of the most use to the people.

I have no objection to your reprinting the work, and in doing so, to give it the name of "The New American Clerk's Magazine, and Complete Practical Counsellor." It will be found to be a most useful and necessary addition to the library of every citizen of Maryland.

I am, with respect and esteem, Your obedient servant, G. GUVALL.

Mr. John B. Colvin.

Writing to make the book cheap, the terms will be as follows, to wit: I. It will be printed with a good type on good paper, and contain above 500 pages Octavo—perhaps 400.

II. It will be neatly bound and lettered. III. The price will be 2 dollars to subscribers, and 2 dollars 50 cents to non-subscribers. No money required till the work is delivered.

IV. Persons procuring eleven subscribers, and becoming answerable for the money, shall receive a twelfth copy gratis. The acts of assembly, up to the close of the last session, will be attended to.
