It is with emotions of diffidence, that the au-Thor of the above letters, submits them to publie scruting; indeed he would not have presumed to do so, had not the solicitations and advice of some judicious friends tended to influence his determination, by a flattering opinion, that they will prove interesting and entertaining. The author has collected his materials from actual observations, during much leisure in the interim of suspended duty. To men of erudition, and even those of limited understandings and shallow penetration, the mutability of human affairs must be of moment; therefore, doubtless, a concise and comprehensive description of the celebrated Island of Malta, will prove interesting to most classes of people; for, though the situation be the same as when the unhappy Queen Dide visited it, the many calamities of revolution since that period, resulting principally from the invasion of Barbarians, together with the present happy estate of the Maltese, under the fostering care and protection of the British flag, all combine to render the history (which is indeed very little known in the Western World) of the Island momentous.-Through the mediums of print and tradition, most of us have some knowledge of the destructive effects of Vesuvi us, in the neighborhood of Naples. Here the i Imagination is presented with a prospect equally dreary and melancholy; and deformed with such portentous aspects of barranness and ruin, 23 devastation, in all its vestments of fury, seldom furnishes for the meditation of desponding humanity. The ancient Cities of Hercularium and Pompei, were entirely covered over many from the crater of this ever memorable Volcano; and with them, their inhabitants and wealth, the latter consisting chiefly in the works of the Sculptor and Painter; an immensity of which has recontly been developed and deposited in a Fluseum for the inspection of the curious. On the subject of those remains of profound antiquity, the author has been copious and precise in his remarks.

Those desirous of feasting their curiosity by subscribing for a copy, are respectfully invited to call at either of the following places : where subscriptions will be thankfully received, viz.

The printing offices of Messrs. Pechin & Frailes and Cole & fiewes; the book-stores of Messrs. Warner & Hanna, Saml. Butler, Sower & Cole, | enclude: from all benefit of the said er v.c.-George Hell, P. Borne, V. & S. Bonsall, and Abraham Knight, I'ell's Foint, and the Coffee-House.
