FOR TEACHING THE
FRENCH LANGUAGE,
No. 6, Water-street, between South and Calvert-streets.
THE method of instilling the elements of the French language, pursued by the subscriber, is the most easy, most pleasant, and most expeditious of any, by which an unknown language can be attained.
Young persons inclined to bestow a few months attention, may, by this improved method, without the drudgery attending the ordinary routine of teaching, qualify themselves to read and speak the French language with freedom, taste, and precision.
The School for public teaching will be open every evening (during the winter) from 7 to 9 o'clock.
The subscriber gives private lessons in the forenoon, at home and abroad—and he begs leave to inform Germans that he is sufficiently familiarized with their language to teach them French, or English, with perspicuity and dispatch.
A prospectus explanatory of the new method of teaching, may be had by applying at the school.
