COMMERCIAL DAILY ADVERTISER

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1805

CRITIQUE'N criticism does well enough: setting aside the bosom scrutiny -- but his narrazive is rather too lengthy, at this late period.— However, had the production been handed us, so as to have appeared before the second representation of the new play, it should have found a place in our columns.

Anact of the Legislature of the United States, passed and approved March 26, 1894, altered the period of meeting for the next congress, thereafter, from the first Monday in December, ! to the first Monday in November. An imperfect recollection of said act, led us into error, when i we penned the statement on the subject vester- ! day: - we then conceived, tirst the act had force on the ensuing session; but since, we have discovered, that it only applied to November session, 1804. So that, it appears, the first Monday in December, is the regular period for the inceting of the next congress. We would, [here observe, that, we find, incorrect impressions respecting the act in question, have occasioned a blander, in more than one print.

> On the 12th July, the Emperor returned the compliment by inviting the whole of the mercantile Body, and the principal foreign consuls, who were present at the preceeding feast, to an entertainment at the Taurd's palace, where as before the dined together. After dinner their Majesties retired to the Hall of Audience, where they received the compilments of several of the principal Merchants who were presented by the minister of commerce on the occasion, and also those of the respective consuls present.

These, we believe are the first instances of a monarch of Russia dining with a corporation of Merchants. The present Emperor, who is the idol of his subjects, animated by the most laudable views to their happiness, is ever active in

The high consideration with which the commerce of America is regarded in Russia is evinced by the position in which their flags were placed at the feast given at the Exchange and the distinguished attention which we find its consul to have received at the court of St. Petersburg, and which was extended to him in a most pointed manner on these public occasions, are ample testimonies of the respect entertained by the Emperor for the United

A JEWISHTRADITION,

Mentioned by Addison.

Moses in a conserence with the Supreme Being, was permitted to ask him some questions concerning his management of the world, and among the same was commanded to look down on the plain below, where at a spring which issucd out of the mountain, he saw a soldier alight from his horse to drink; who being gone, a litthe boy came and found a purse of gold which the soldier had dropt, and taking it up went away with it; next came an infirm old man, weary with age and travelling, and he having quenched his thirst, sat down to rest himself by the spring; when the soldier missing his purse returned for it, and the old man protest. inghe had not seen it, the soldier killed him. Moses, struck with horror and amazement, the Divine voice thus prevented his expostulation; be not surprised Moses, nor enquire why the judge of the hole cuth has suffered this to be; the child indeed was the occasion that the old man lost his life, but know, the same old man had murdered that child's father.

The City of Derne in Africa, the scene of the recent galiant exploits of our countryman, General Eaton, composed one of the five principal cities which distinguished the province of Cyrenia by the name of Pentapolis, Darnis or Dern is the first city: Cyrene the second is now called Curin, and is in ruins; its sea port was Apollonia and is now named Marsa Susa or Sosush, Tolemais, the third city, at a distance from the sea, now bears the name Toltmetta. Theuchira, the fourth city, was called Arsince under the princes of Egypt, and still remains. The situation of Adreanc agrees with that of the present Bengazi, "but Berenice (another of the five cities)" it appears, says D'Anville, by a particular testimony, is the same as Bernie, and Ben gazi and Bernie are different names for one place." It is to be regretted that D'Anville has omitted to state the " particular testimony" to which he alludes. The desart of Lybia is truly classic ground; the Lucan has described in strong terms the sufferings of Cato, with the remainder of Pompay's motley army after the battle of Pharsalia; against F. C.
