The spectable proposed to be presented to the public consists altogether of Philosophical op ration.

It wai be a series of Phenomena, which will fix the attention by surprising effects and exercise the genius for discovering the causes of acron.

Even those persons who may be accusinted. with the principles of the constions, vili probabis find something new and interesting in the application of them.

Fire will be seen glittering inside of glass vessels, and the same the extinguishing in i flame and fire under different forms. Lamps will be seen fed by ever mon water, a nothing. Some of these lamps with a feint flame hard. ly giving any light at a few inches distance, will in ame an even fuse all combustible matters! metas, or vitrifiable bodies, and iron in an instant will become red hot.

A fine and hard white metal will be seen in full tusion coming out of water and taking any fo. m in moulds.

Fire will burst out and loud reports will be heard, considerably stronger than what can be p - aced by gun-powder without my applicat in or use whate er of fire.

A light will be seen perhaps more dazzling that the sun at noon of a fine summer day, suddenly created and visibly without any kind

Iron will be seen in full fusion, in a glass vessel, filling its capacity with a real shints. sparkles, and going down to the bottom in rehot globular particles-this will be preduced without any other free than a little grain of sulphur lighted by a cardle. A child will be seen lifting considerable weights, by no other action than his blowing : and many hundred poimus will be litted by the power of only a few ounces of water. The speciators will see the strange effects of a combination of metals (which is called G.1 vanism) upon the mustles and herves of animals.

Many other operations will be exhibited. which are not present to the memory, or an endmerat not which, would exceed the limits of this notice.

Thus will be employed the first part of every night, in a selection of subjects, always var.ed. The seems part will be of a quite different nature; it consists of optical illusions.

The spectarers in the dark will see apparitions, spectres, and figures of various kinds; some an searing suddenly, others issuing gradually from luminous points and clouds; some advincing forward in a manner which would terril such as could forget that they are at a public spectacle.

In these apparitions personages will be seen of every age and conditions, figures in motion, shades of the dead, coming out of graves; monsters of various shapes : and they will see a representation of the Elysian Fields.

As a diversion to such doleful objects, figures will also be present a from fable, from history; inhabitants of different parts of the world, in their natural dresses : the most remarkable species of wild animals: landscapes, herds of -cattle, marine views, vessels at sea, and many objects which altogether will, it is hoped, give satisfaction and pleasure to the lovers of the

The present notice is only intended to give an idea of the nature of these exhibitions. No Exameration is attempted; what is announced. will be exhibited and many other objects equally curious which are not mentioned.
