Stereotype Plates has been warmly recommended in some offthe Boston Papers and from the representation given of them | composed the whole family) that from the we are led to believe they would answer the purpose completely.

The extent of the trouble arising from these forgeries may be inferred from the following remarks, copied from the Salem

Register. The increase of Counterfeit Bills is beyond enample. So serious an evil déserves some remedy. All private business is embarrassed. The honest man posent friend in trouble. It is said some new invention will remove this evil, and a Book can be printed to explain the invention. It certainly is necessary that the banks holders should most seriously engage in their enquiries into the most effectual means, at least, to check an increasing and distressing evil.

ing to subjects of the United States, and ving taken her cargo of Plaister of Paris Cove, in the Island of Campo-Bello, in contrary to the provision of the Navigation act and other British laws of trade.-The sloop and cargo were claimed by Ebenezer Lock, the master, upon the ground that the waters in which these vessels were lying at the time the said cargo was so laden were either wholly within and belonged to the United States, or were neutral, free or common to the vessels of both nations, for the purpose oftrade and navigation. Wednesday and Friday were occupied in the hearing of the cause, and on Saturday his worship William Botsford, Esq. judge of the court pronounced his decree, by which the sloop and her cargo are condemned and forfeit- instant. ed, upon the ground that the place in question where the cargo was laden on board, was on the British side of a line drawn through the waters between Campo-bello and Dudley Islands, the latter of which is in possesion of subjects of the United States, the claim was dismissed but without cost, as it appeared in evidence that such a trade had been practised for some years past, with the knowledge and consent of the custon-house officers of both Governments; and there appeared to be no intention of fraud on the part of the claim .....s.

FROM CADIZ. "The French and Spaniards, wounded in the battle off Trafaigar, amounting to 5; 00, have wounded, &c. is not short of 15,000. There were few ships that had less than 300. Out of ten ships which escaped into Cadiz, there are not three worth repairing."

A London editor, commenting on the Austro- inhabitants of the northern states. Russian victory, thus remarks-

"The Emperor Alexander, as we have already stated, was in the thickest and hottest of the battle—he animated the troops by his courage; he inspired them with the utmost enthusiasm, by the manner in which he exposed his person. Every one knows the affection, partaking of a sentiment of adoration, which the Russians feel for their sovereign. Never was that affection and adoration carried to a -higher pitch, than when the Russsian troops saw themselves led into battle by their beloved · Alexander.—They advanced to the charge with shouts of triamph, with their own national songs, and with huzzas.

"The Emperor Alexander is a most noble and commanding figure. His countenance inspires confidence and love; open, manly, and affable.-The manner in which the Russians received and made the last attack is described as having been tremendous. After a short time cannon were of little use in the centre, for the troops fought at the point of the bayonet."

Extract of a letter from a member of the legislature at Lancaster, dated Feb. 14.

44 Although the turnpike bill has passed in our house, it is understood to meet with some difficulty in the Senate. A bill was however brought in yesterday, by the friends of the northern route, for another incorporation, which it is supposed will carry; and it will then remain for the citizens to encourage the northern route, which is for the interest of Pennsylvania.

We yesterday, agreed implicitly to all the amendments proposed by the senate to the judiciary bill, although the reduction of the judges, and the taxing of the prothonotaries, went very much against the grain, but we thought it imprudent to. pledge the fate of the whole upon secondary objects.

So the bill is enacted, and we shall now soon hear who is to be chief justice, and whether private interest will be sacrificed to public good—I trust it will."

The revenue of the planter in the Territory of Orleans is truly astomshing.--The culture of sugar on the rich and the unexhausted banks of the Mississippi, has within a few years raised many of the cultivators from a state of indigence to a degree of affluence to which the mhabitants of other parts of the Union can never hope to attain. From the labour of 40 or 50 prime negroes, an annual income of from ten to twenty thousand dollars is confidently expected; and so certain is the crop that these expectations are seldom or ever disappointed. Next to the planter of cane, the cultivator of cotton is most liberally rewarded, and the rapid augm nabeen exchanged. Their total loss in killed, tation of the fortunes of the inhabitants of the Mississippi territory, proves that this species of cr.p. casy to cultivate, and requiring little experience or toil, is long both from Baltimore. destined to give them advantages over the Montego-Bay, (Jam.) Jan. 25. Arrived the ship Anne, one of a fleet from Cork, which with 23 other merchantmen, sailed on the 12th of December, under convoy of the Arethusa, Boadicea, and Wasp. The following is Captain Thomson's information:

"On the 15th, in lat. 45, long. 11, at day break, saw the Boadicea' chasing a strange sail to the N. W.; seven more mmediately appeared in the same direction, and eight more in the S. W. After signals had been made between them and the Boadicea, which was very near them, the Arethusa made the signal for the convoy to disperse for their dwn security. The men of war and a number of the convoy stood to the N. N. W. and the rest to the Southward; at sun down saw, from our mast head, 16 sail of the convoy, steering to the S.S. W. and could only see a few of the sternmost of the enemy's ships, still going to the Northward. On the 17th, joined the Jamaica, Gleg; Hannah, Lightly; -, Lightfoot; Anne and Grand Duke, for Jamaica; Venerable, for Honduras, and Flora, for Antigua; which we kept company with till off St. Kitt's, when we joined the Fisgard's convoy, all but the Flora which went into Antigua."

Off Cape Tibuton, the Cork fleet was bined by his Mujesty's ship La Pipque, Captain Ross, who conveyed the North ERRATUM.
