

little or no public business this session, & that in the circumstances in which the country was at present placed they ought to do something before they talked of going home. This motion was opposed by Mr. Early, who considered it high time for that body to be looking towards home, and who knew of no business that ought to detain them—Motion not carried. A motion was then made that the House resolve itself into a committee of the whole on the state of the union—this was opposed, and a motion made to adjourn until Monday—not carried.

The House having resolved itself into a committee of the whole, on the state of the union, John Cotten Smith took the chair. Mr. Nicholson's resolution being read, Mr. Mumford rose, and said, he was a merchant, but that he would speak the language of an independent American. That it pained him to see gentlemen forget their own and eulogize a foreign country. The praises bestowed on a certain British publication, he did not approve, and that Great Britain acted against her own principles, as laid down by Lord Hawkebury. To prove this he read an extract from the memorial of the merchants of Boston to Congress, which stated that when a representation was presented to that body by Mr. King, in consequence of a preceeding violation of the rights of neutrals, by the British, and by Lord H. laid before the King in Council, not more than four years back, it was determined that neutrals had a right to carry produce where the continuity of the voyage was broken, and this determination was made known to our Ambassadors by the King's commands, through the medium of the Duke of Portland. This was a plain matter of fact, and he was surprised, after a knowledge of all this that gentleman, in an American Congress should palliate the conduct of this foreign nation, and indiscriminately censure their own President. Were we ready, asked Mr. M. to defend our national independence, or to submit to our national independence, the fact of his most gracious majesty on the throne, servilely pray him to pardon our past transgressions, and again take us into his holy keeping. He hoped the House was disposed to adopt the former plan. If so something was necessary to be done, for he had been an eye witness to their barbarous conduct towards one of our citizens, whom they had whipped from ship to ship, and what was his crime? Why truly he had been impressed into their cruel service, and not being willing to fight the allies of his country, he would not enter it. Such was his crime, and to his punishment Mr. M. was an eye witness. For such conduct, continued this gentleman, we had no redress, nor the means of procuring any, without we made our flag respected in the high seas at least. It has been said that France carried on the war, by the support afforded her commerce by the American flag; this was not the case; the whole of her commerce produced but one tenth of her revenue. According to Mr. Randolph Great Britain can do no wrong, yet they had asserted new principles to our injury, and adopted new measures, without giving us any previous information thereof, by which they captured and carried into port all Americans, and this with safety, as if we recovered the property, still we paid the costs, and this deterred our citizens from a fair and just trade. A want both of time and room prevents a continuance now, of the debate. On Wednesday, we shall conclude Mr. M's remarks, as well as those of some other gentleman.

We have heard much of Mr. Randolph's incorruptibility, so we did of Robespierre's. The latter, however, achieved deeds red enough to make even Angels weep. At the close of the session a certain great man, it is said, means to visit England. The comparison of the situation of the inhabitants of the one with those of the other country, may enable him to appreciate both more justly than he does at present. Is it true, that a refusal to a certain Embassy has produced the verba ardentia in favor of Britain—her piracies, and her cruelties? A certain Orator's words, who lately spouted Latin. Did we not detest pedantry we should say his verba ardentia were, in truth, simply vox et præterea nihil. Don Quixotte attacked wind-mills, Mr. Randolph, more heroic, impeaches the patriotism and talents of Mr. Jefferson and Mr. Madison. How liberal was Mr. Randolph—he assured the House of Representatives on Friday that he had expended nine shillings in purchasing "War in Disguise," (a defence of British aggressions) and valued it infinitely more than another pamphlet (written in defence of our rights), it is believed, by Mr. Madison) which cost him not a sou.

As Mr. Randolph's extraordinary speeches are to be published, we hope it will be done verbatim, as delivered. It then might accompany the 500 copies of Mr. Gregg's resolutions, printed, by order of Mr. R's friend the British Minister, with a view of sending them to England. The Irish who have lately come into this country, said Mr. Randolph, were worse than the Africans. No doubt Mr. R. thought so, for most of them had fought the battles of freedom, contending against his most sacred majesty's oppressions.

Mr. Randolph, on Thursday last, spoke a long time in Latin. It is understood some of the western members mean to refute him in Dutch.

CHILLICOTHE, Feb. 27. The Indian alarm, like the mountain in Labrador, is at length over; but, has indeed, brought forth nothing. The fears of two or three timid persons, were all that were produced, which have fled and as much imbeciled as the cause was idle which gave the alarm. The following will show that had they even the power, the will was not present. Our friends at a distance may rest assured that danger was not in the least dreaded by any intelligent citizen of the state, nor has emigration been retarded.

The Governor has received a communication from Mad. River, informing him that two Indian chiefs and an interpreter, upon the receipt of his message, came into the settlement and assured the people that they had no intention of making war upon them. The Indians are considerably alarmed, and the chiefs have sent word they will shortly be at Chillicothe to give the Governor every satisfaction that may be required relative to their conduct. The people are satisfied, and those who had left their homes are returning back again.

The Stockholders

In the Maryland Insurance Company, and others, who are invited to dine at Evan's THIS-DAY, are hereby notified that DINNER will be on the table at four o'clock, P. M.

On Federal authority, a few days since, we were unwilling to believe that Mr. John Randolph had so conspicuously rendered himself a suspicious politician as was then represented; but under the force of additional evidence, now before us, we are obliged to admit, at least, that his PATRIOTISM, in our opinion, is not so splendid as his ELOQUENCE. In that portion of his speech, on Mr. Gregg's resolution, already published, some of the sentiments advanced, seem so degrading to the American character, that we are ready to believe, that in their formation, Mr. Randolph paid more respect to beauty in the turning of his periods, and to the loftiness of his style and figures, than to the propriety, correctness or nature of their matter, or their intent, tendency and meaning. It has been said that Mr. Randolph is naturally petulant and irascible; and, as the Expositor insinuates, (as will be seen in our columns to-day) that an embassy was sought for in vain—it may be presumed disappointment has soured his temper to more than the ordinary degree. Perhaps, if his system will admit, the depletion he recommended to his opponents, might, if applied to himself, prove a physical and salutary dampner, to allay his ferocity in defence of British glory and invincibility!

The APPARENT defection of Mr. Randolph is so much the order of the day, that in presenting the Expositor's exposure of his wonderful speech, we believe we furnish our readers with the most interesting product of the last mails. We understand, says an Alexandria paper, that the house of representatives of the U. States yesterday [Monday] passed the resolution offered by Mr. Nicholson some time since—ayes 85—noes 37.

The ship Margaret, we understand, from the East Indies is in the bay, and about 40 others, all bound up.

The Brig Hero, Rawleigh, sailed from St. John's, N. B. on the 3d inst. for this port.

On Tuesday morning, the 18th instant, the body of Duncan McColm, blacksmith, who for many years resided on Fell's Point, was taken up at one of the wharves there. It appears from what we have been able to collect, that this unhappy man attended divine service on Sunday preceding; the discourse affected him much. On his return home he sought the text, and conceived it immediately applied to himself, in a serious and striking point of view. It is stated he became melancholy and mentally deranged; and notwithstanding his family paid a close attention to his actions, he, nevertheless, evaded their observation, and in the night secretly left the house in his stocking feet, and shocking to relate, in his delirium, there is every reason to believe, he precipitated himself into the basin, from whence he was taken, as stated.

We are informed, Mr. McColm was a native of Scotland; and his industry and just dealing, secured him, whilst living, general respect and esteem.

We learn, that by fire, on Hawkins's Point, on Sunday the 2d inst. six houses were destroyed, the property of Mr. George Mayo Sellman. It originated in a building occupied by Mr. John Burgess; it first took fire in the roof, by a spark from the chimney; Mrs. Burgess was alone in the house, and before any assistance could be obtained the building and its contents were consumed. The strength of the wind communicated the fire so rapidly to the other houses, that no exertions could possibly have saved them.

In the month of January last, a son of Warren Scott, aged 14 years, was torn in pieces by wolves, while foddering cattle, in the town of Newberg, in the state of New York.

IMPORTANT. Captain Swan, of the sloop Sea Horse, who arrived yesterday, left Nantucket on Friday last, and informs, that an Irish gentleman was landed there on Wednesday, from on board a brig 49 days from Lisbon, for Salem—this gentleman confirms the French news received at this port by the Frances Ann—and also informed, that Peace had been concluded between France and the Allies.

The brig arrived at Nantucket is the Henry, She left Lisbon the 22d of January. [New York Gazette.]

In obedience to the resolutions of the Common Council, meetings were held on Friday evening in the several wards. Two memorials, one to Congress and the other to the legislature of this state were read and approved; and a respectable committee appointed in each ward to sign them in behalf of the citizens in general. These memorials pray, that measures be adopted to erect permanent defences, to secure our city from depredation; and that (until such defences can be erected) a part of our ships of war be stationed in our harbor, as a security against predatory incursions. On this occasion, we are happy to learn, there was not a dissenting voice. Indeed, the object is one that cannot fail to deeply interest the feelings of every individual. It will be fortunate for our city and our country, if the same spirit of unanimity pervade the legislative bodies, to which the memorials are addressed. [N. Y. Com. Adv.]

(COMMUNICATED.) Theatre, Monday—Yesterday our first Tragedian, Mr. Cooper, took his departure for Philadelphia, where he is engaged to play for a few nights, previous to his departure for Charleston, S. C. In consequence of this deprivation, the tears of Melthone, will be succeeded, by the smiles of Thalia; one of her laugh inspiring ministers, the versatile JEFFERSON, has come among us, en passant, to charm us with his well remembered powers—His debut, on this occasion, will be in Jacob Gawkky, in the elegant Comedy of The Chapter of Accidents.

We feel regret in observing that Mr. JEFFERSON's stay among us, cannot exceed a week, when he will be compelled, by his articles with the Philadelphia Manager, to retire from this city, which will be ever dear to his recollection; as it was here that he made his first professional essay, on this continent, and was supported and gladdened by the generous plaudits of its inhabitants.

N. Y. American Citizen.

State of Rhode Island and Providence plantations In General Assembly. House of Representatives, March 1, 1866. Whereas the subjects of his majesty the king of the united kingdom of Great-Britain and Ireland, and the subjects of other foreign belligerent nations, have recently committed unprecedented depredations on the commerce of the citizens of the United States, and have impressed and imprisoned many of the said citizens; and whereas the British courts of admiralty have adopted rules of decision hostile to the just and neutral rights of the United States, and in gross violation of the ancient and acknowledged laws of nations: It is therefore resolved, as the sense of this house, that in fear that the measures of negotiation, which it is presumed the government of the United States have undertaken, or will undertake, to procure the speedy restitution of our captured property and release our impressed seamen, may prove unsuccessful, it is expedient that the exposed and defenceless ports and harbors of the United States be fortified, and the naval force thereof augmented—to the end, that the honor of the United States, and the interest of their citizens, may be more effectually secured.

Resolved, That the senators and representatives in congress from this state, be furnished with a copy of these resolutions, and be requested to use all proper means to procure the adoption, by the legislature of the United States, of the measures herein recommended. Voted and passed unanimously. By order, T. A. FOSTER, clerk. A true copy. SAM'L. EDDY, sec'y.

MESSRS PRINTERS—As you have lately advertised patent Eye-Water, for a gentleman of the faculty, I hope you will have no objection to inserting the following receipt, for the cure of sore eyes, which is offered gratis to the world, and is of superior efficacy to any which is vended by those licensed-murderers of the human race. Take a piece of sugar of lead, of the bigness of an Indian corn, and the same quantity of white vitriol; put them in an ounce phial—fill the phial with softspring water—shake them together—and in twelve hours they will be fit for use. This applied to the eye in small quantities, experience enables me to say will cause an effectual cure. M. HALL.

War Department, February 13th, 1866.

Died, at Philadelphia, on Sunday morning, in the 68th year of his age, General THOMAS PROCTOR.

Died—at Worthington, (Mass) on the 18th ult. Mr. S. Adams, aged 33 years. The circumstances of his death were most shocking—he incautiously placed his left foot in the jaws of a machine, used for breaking tanners bark to prepare it for grinding, into which he was drawn to the course of eight seconds, and his foot and leg were cut into two inch pieces. Filing which extraneous operation he thrust his right hand between two cog wheels which broke it across at the insertion of the wrist, and severed one finger from it. He survived the shock twelve hours and expired. Mr. Adams was a regular and industrious citizen. He has left a wife to mourn the death of an affectionate husband, and two infant children to want the care and support of a tender father.
