LONDON, January 18.

Hints are thrown out of a congress for a general peace to be assembled through the mediation of Prussia. In the 37th bulletin of the French army, general St. Cyr is stated to be on his march "to punish the Queen of Naples." It is probably Bonaparte's intention to add a considerable portion of his Sicilian majesty's dominions to his favorite kingdom of Italy; and, we are much afraid, it will be impossible to prevent him from carrying this plan into effect.

The Electors of Bavaria, Württemberg, and Baden, have taken possession of all the property of the Teutonic and Maltese orders in their territories.

The Vienna Gazette of the 25th ult. in the course of several articles, states, that the French army upon leaving Austria, will march in order to be employed in the expedition against England.

The Electorate of Hanover, it is suggested will be given to the Duke of Brunswick, with some accession of territory.

Previous to the conclusion of the treaty between Austria and France, the Archduke Charles was at the head of 90,000 men at Eidenberg, four posts from Vienna; and his presence evidently produced a favorable effect upon the negotiations which were then pending between the Emperors Francis and Napoleon. Massena's army was very weak, General St. Cyr having been detached with a considerable division against Naples.

The London Courier of the 26th and 27th of December, is filled with the trial of Admiral Sir Robert Calder, for his conduct on the 23d and 24th of July last, after the action with the combined squadrons of France and Spain, and while in sight of the enemy, or not having done his utmost to take or destroy every ship of the enemy which it was his duty to engage. The following is the sentence of the court:

"The court are of opinion, that such conduct on the part of the said Admiral Sir Robert Calder was not the result of fear or cowardice, but of error in judgment, for which he deserves to be severely reprimanded, and he is hereby severely reprimanded accordingly."

Upon the sentence being pronounced, Sir Robert Calder seemed to be deeply affected, and retired without speaking a word. He was accompanied by a great number of friends, and one descending from the deck of the Prince of Wales into his barge, scarcely lifted up his head, which was apparently bowed down by the weight of the sentence pronounced upon him.

On Thursday last the remains of the ever to be lamented Lord Viscount Nelson, were interred in St. Paul's Cathedral, with all the solemn splendour which a mourning and grateful nation could bestow. The procession moved from the Admiralty at 11 o'clock, and reached the church at three. It was attended by about 8000 regular troops, and at least 20,000 volunteers; as likewise by the Prince of Wales, with four or five of his royal brothers, and a vast number of nobility and gentry. The ceremony of interment was grand beyond conception. The pall was supported by Admirals, attended by Naval Captains, and a party of the seamen and marines of the Victory, of 100 guns. Never was a more sublime scene beheld by an admiring people, nor did even public regret appear more general. We are sorry our limits preclude our entering into a more detailed account of this honorable proof of a nation's gratitude to the greatest of men.

NEW KINGDOMS.

As Bavaria, Württemberg and Baden, have lately been erected into Kingdoms, the following account of their extent, population, and revenues, may not be unacceptable:—

The Electorate of Bavaria contained—

Square miles	16,176
Population	1,931,000
Revenues	1,666,000
Forces	13,000

Now this is converted into a kingdom, according to the accounts most recently received, it will have its revenues and population doubled; and all that at the expence of the House of Austria.

Württemberg contained—

Square miles	3,200
Population	600,000
Revenues	245,000
Forces	6,000

This Electorate most probably will be more than doubled, else it will be able to support the royal dignity intended to be conferred upon it.

The revenues, territories, and population of Baden, another of the favored Princes, are still inferior to those of the Duke of Württemberg, and were as under:

Extent in square miles	872
Population	200,000
Forces	1,500

After the Treaty of Lusseritz, Austria contained—

Extent in square miles	179,904
Population	10,439,000
Revenues	10,307,000
Forces	63,000

The united revenues of the three favored powers amounted to 1,941,000, or between one half and one sixth of the revenues of the Imperial family, their territories, united to 10,308 square miles, which is only one eighth of those of the Emperor; their forces to 19,500 men, which is not equal to much more than one twentieth.

PARIS, December 31.

Tribute.—According to a meeting of December 30.

M. Caron Naso presented the following project:

The French people concentrate, in a national temple, the monuments and the trophies of the day of Austerlitz, and of the campaign terminated by that victory.

When a general peace shall take place, the sword, worn by Napoleon I. in that battle shall be deposited with religious, civil and military pomp, in this temple, to be henceforward taken from thence with the same pomp by the emperor of the French, every time he places himself at the head of his troops, and to be replaced with the same ceremonies after victory and peace.

In this temple shall be inscribed in bas-relief, and in bronze, the bulletins of the grand army, the names of all the generals and superior officers who commanded in it; of all the divisions which composed it; of those brave men who perished during the campaign; of all those who were wounded; of all those who received marks of honor; and the names of the members of the great bodies of the state at the epoch when this vote shall be adopted. These tables shall be spread over the whole surface of the empire, and placed in the principal church of the chief place of each department.

In every year, the 28th of August, the anniversary of the birth of Napoleon the great, the saviour of France and of Europe, shall be throughout the empire a day of grand, religious, civil and military solemnity.

At this solemnity, in every department, there shall be read publicly the names of all conscripts who shall be under their colors, the recital of their heroic actions, and the testimony to their relations of the satisfaction of their country. There shall be also read the names of those who shall not have rejoined their colors, they shall be declared dead to honor, and the affliction of their country shall be testified to their relations.

Every three years this solemnity shall assume the name of the grand European fete.—Solemn games shall be celebrated in honor of Napoleon 1st, the Saviour of Europe, at which grand prizes shall be distributed in all the arts, to all descriptions of talent in all the sciences, and to every virtue which honors civilized Europe. The emperor of the French shall preside over this fete, from whose hand the men shall receive their prizes; the women from the hand of the empress.

All the foreign ambassadors shall be invited to this ceremony—all the people of the continent of Europe shall be admitted at this assemblage.

The first annual solemnity, and the first grand triennial fete, shall take place on the 28th of August next. The tribunals leave it to the government to determine upon the manner of executing the articles of the vote above expressed.

M. Durveyor proposed a triumphal column, on the model of the pillar of Trajan, to be surrounded by edifices corresponding with its dignity.

M. Freville proposed a national and religious fete, to be solemnized every year on the birth day of the emperor.

All these propositions were referred to a committee, consisting of M. M. Faure, Girardin, Gallois, Curee, and Albinson. The members of the committee withdrew.

Letter from his Majesty the Emperor, to the Senate.

SENATORS.—Peace has been concluded at Presburgh, and ratified at Vienna, between me and the Emperor of Austria.—It was my wish at a solemn sitting, to inform you myself of the conditions, but having, some time since, agreed with the king of Bavaria, on the marriage of my son, Prince Eugene, with the Princess Augusta, his daughter, and being at Munich at the moment the celebration of the marriage is about to take place, I cannot resist the pleasure of remaining with the young couple, who are models of their sex. I am besides desirous of giving to the royal house of Bavaria, and to the brave Bavarian nation, who have rendered me so many services, and have shewn me so much friendship, and whose ancestors were constantly united in policy and disposition with France, this proof of my consideration and my particular esteem.—The marriage is to take place on the 15th of January. My arrival in the midst of my people will thus be retarded for some days. These days will appear long to my heart, but after having been unceasingly occupied in the duties of a soldier, I experience a tender relaxation in occupying myself with the business and the duties of a father of a family.—Not wishing, however, to delay longer the publication of the Treaty of peace, I have ordered, in pursuance of our Constitutional Statutes, that it should be communicated to you, without delay, in order that it may be published as a law of the Empire.

Done at Munich, the 8th Jan. 1806.

NAPOLÉON,
The Secy. of State, H. B. MARET.

STUTTGART, January 1.

This day, in the forenoon, the agreeable intelligence of the creation of this Electorate into a monarchy was announced here, by the ringing of bells and the discharge of 100 pieces of cannon, partly before, and partly after Divine Service. A herald has also proclaimed the event in all the public places, which has been received with loud acclamations, and every demonstration of joy.
