

The following melancholy article is copied from the "Penny-Calendar Correspondent," printed at Doylestown, in Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

News of murders and robberies, generally excites a greater degree of interest, than information of any other kind. Intelligence is circulating in this neighborhood, of which the following is the substance.—Its authenticity is not sworn to; but should it prove to have been a melancholy reality, the public shall hear "more about it."

FOREIGN seems quite the order of the day;—and if a punishment is not made the consequence of this crime, sufficiently exemplary and deterring, its prevalence must soon destroy a great portion of paper negotiation, by rendering it in the highest degree precarious and risky. Even the scrutiny of the Bank will not prove a protecting barrier against the fraud unless an efficient check is given to its commission. Another discovery in this nefarious line has been made. A young man, named Lecompte, was yesterday arrested at a Broker's office in this city, where he presented for discount two notes with different names as drawers, but with the same endorser on both—and likewise a check dated the 19th inst. the name completely corresponding with that attached as drawer on the notes.—It seems, some days past, a note for 640 dollars was received in the same office and discounted; it had been discovered to be a forgery; but the broker could not particularly describe the person from whom it was received; fortunately, however, when Lecompte, incautiously offered the notes yesterday, it was observed they had an indorser, the same name which was on the one which had proved to be a forgery; this created suspicion. He was asked respecting the other note, and he acknowledged he had presented it. An officer was sent for, and he was taken before a magistrate. The editor was present when the first note was presented, which, without the least hesitation, he declared he had written entire; and we learn he made the same acknowledgment as to the other notes and check.—The penmanship is handsomely executed, and the names are considered complete imitations.

"We are sorry to have occasion to add, that Charles Lecompte is a Marylander. He informed he has a father and three sisters in Dorset county. Imprudent and unhappy youth, sitting aside thy own ignominy—what must be the agonizing, the excruciating sensations of, perhaps, a fond parent and affectionate sisters, when they learn the amount of thy crime and disgrace! Could not such a reflection arrest thy guilty hand? No. We fear the insensibility manifested at the period of examination and confession, declare thee hardened against the force of such amicable—and many considerations.—He was duly committed."

We are indebted to a commercial friend for the following extract of a letter from Laguna, dated 17th March, 1806.

"We have 10,000 men in arms to receive Mr. Miranda, who will have a warm reception. An embargo is laid on all vessels, and very uncertain when it will be taken off." U. S. Gaz.

[A commercial friend informed the editor last evening that he had received a letter from a well informed character, late a merchant of Baltimore, dated La Guira, the 16th ult. but it makes no mention of an embargo or the embodying of forces, as stated above, the date of which is only one day later. We are inclined to believe, that Mr. Bronson, who has ever been eager in the pursuit of early information respecting Miranda, has, in this instance, been imposed on, or he would impose on others. We know the writer of the letter our friend received, and had such important transactions been mediated or taken place, they would have been noticed, as the gentleman was copious in his detail of affairs in general.]

COMMUNICATION.

FIRE!—On Friday last, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, a fire took place on the wharf occupied by Mr. Griffith Coombe as a lumber-yard. The devouring element caught in a pile of upwards of 30,000 shingles and from the strong gale of wind which blew that day from the N. W. it threatened destruction to the whole of the lumber in the yard; but from the timely assistance, unremitting and extraordinary exertions of the citizens in removing the adjacent scantling and other combustible materials it did little damage more than consume the shingles in which the fire was first discovered.

On this calamitous occasion the citizens, in the true spirit of philanthropy, seemed to contend with one another who should do the most good.—Some gentlemen, attached to the fourth fire ward, particularly distinguished themselves, whose names deserve to be recorded; but from motives of delicacy towards others whose best endeavors are not less meritorious in rescuing from destruction the property of their fellow neighbor.

The fire is supposed to have been communicated by a coal blowing from a pipe of one of the hands of a vessel-laying alongside of the wharf, as no fire had been allowed on board during that and the preceding day on account of the wind.

April 17.

A man living on or near the Dry Lands, who had to pay the sum of 800l. about the first of April, called on a neighbour who kept a public house, informed him of the payment he had to make, and observed, he had the whole amount, at his own house, except 15l. which he wished to loan for a few weeks; the landlord very cheerfully agreed to lend the sum required, stating that he had it not in possession, but expected to go abroad the next day to collect the money, and would return in the evening, when his neighbour might call and receive the sum wanted.

With the joy which an honest man derives from the expectation of being able to fulfil his contracts, did the neighbour call at the time appointed; the landlord had not returned; he therefore waited contentedly, every moment expecting him to come in;—at the request of the land-lady, he concluded to retire to bed, and if asleep, at the return of her husband, he was to be called up; it being late he soon fell asleep—but had not slept long before his slumbers were disturbed by terrific dreams; he awoke his bed-fellow (a pedlar who had taken his lodgings there for one night only) and informed him he had dreamed his house was on fire, and his wife and children enveloped in the flames. The pedlar intreated him to lie down and quiet his apprehensions; but expostulations were unavailing to man whose imagination is disordered from the idea that his family are in imminent danger. He would go home, and the pedlar feeling interested in the interpretation of the dream, agreed to accompany him: taking along a pair of excellent pistols which he had with him, well loaded. The night was dark, and as they approached the house, a bright light excited new and strong suspicions. Each taking a pistol, they cautiously approached the lighted window, where with astonishment, they beheld 3 men with blackened faces, counting money at a table; each of the spectators singled out his man, and two of the midnight plunders fell lifeless on the floor; the third was met at the door, but conscious guilt had unmoved his arm—he was soon dispatched.—Reader, "If you have tears prepare to shed them now." The agitated husband went into his bed-chamber, where the wife of his bosom, and three young children were weltering in blood, and closing their eyes in death, having been inhumanly butchered "in the unsuspicious moments of sleep," by the three persons before mentioned. My informant could not give the names of the parties, but states, that on washing the blackened faces of the deceased robbers, they proved to be near neighbours of the owner of the house, and were intimate family connections.

Married by the reverend Dr. Rattoone, on Tuesday evening, Mr. James Hopkins, to Miss Rachel Groundsfield, both of this city.
