NEW-YORK, May 24

Captain Conklin, of the ship True American, left Amsterdam on the 20th of April, at which time 7 sail of the line, 2 frigates, 5 brigs, and 2 sloops were in the Texel ready for sea, but without troops on board. We learn, verbally, that a courier from Paris arrived at the Hague the latter end of March with dispatches, the object of which was said to be to offer to the republic either to incorporate itself with the French empire as an additional department, or to accept a French Prince at the head of its government. Their high magnificence, the states general were in consequence specially convoked on the 2d of April, to take this subject into consideration. The result was not known on the 18th; but the general opinion was that a French Prince would eventually be accepted in the person of Louis Bonaparte. Our Dutch papers by the True American are altogether without interest. We merely learn from them that the king of Naples was preparing to take refuge in Malta; that Hanover had become a Prussian province; and that William V. prince of Orange, son of the late stadtholder, died at Brunswick on the 8th April.

The British packet Lord Hobart left Falmouth on the 11th of April. Her latest London paper is of the 8th, 2 days later than our previous advices, and contains the following interesting articles:— LONDON, April 8. On Saturday we announced that an embargo had been that day ordered on all Prussian vessels in the ports of this country. The intelligence, when it first transpired in the City, caused no little surprise, and the general question was—What can have occasioned this? It was soon made public, that Prussia, after accepting Hanover, had agreed with France to assist in excluding our commerce from the Continent. Not only all the ports of Prussia are shut against us, but all which Prussia and France can influence and control, such as Bremen, &c. &c. We understand that Hamburg is already occupied by the Prussians.

On Sunday the 30th ult. about four o'clock in the afternoon, a sudden and peremptory order was communicated from the British Vice Consul desiring them to quit that place in twelve hours, and the Elbe without delay. This intimation was given in consequence of an official notice by the Prussian Consul, declaring that all the ports of the Prussian dominions, and all other ports in the N. of Europe, where his Prussian Majesty possesses any controul, were to be shut against British vessels and British manufactures.

The consternation occasioned at Hamburg by the resolution come to by Prussia, was very great. The boom which used every night to be shut was, on this occasion left open. Some ships sailed in ballast only, one without ballast; some with all the cargoes they had carried out, others half unladen. So pressing was the order that the officer of his Majesty's sloop Spy, which, in company with a brig cutter, had gone up the Elbe as far as Stadt, to protect the shipping coming down, declared that any vessel left behind, later than the given time, he must burn.

Yesterday eight vessels arrived in the River from Hamburg. They form part of a fleet of 24 sail of British vessels which were lying at Hamburg. The greater part of which have since arrived, according to our Post letters of this day. About a fortnight ago 2000 Prussian troops, with a large train of heavy artillery, passed down the Elbe for Stadt and Cuxhaven. On Monday last the masters of some of the British vessels landed at Cuxhaven, where the Prussians are employed in raising two formidable batteries, each of 25 pieces of heavy ordnance. On Tuesday they wished again to go on shore, but were refused permission by the Commander of the Spy sloop.

Great apprehensions were entertained at Hamburg that all British property would be confiscated. It is stated that the quantity of British property now there is not so considerable as it was lately. The British subjects are apprehensive for their personal safety. It was reported that the whole of the Corps commanded by Marshal Augereau is on its march from the neighborhood of Frankfort towards the Elbe. It is even said, that not only Swedish Pomerania is to be occupied, but Holstein and every port or place within the reach of French and Prussian troops, through which British manufactures could be introduced to the Continent, and with which British vessels could trade.

It is very much feared that the war with the Maharratta States is renewed. Intelligence to that effect is said to have been brought by a passenger, arrived from Calcutta in the Hamburg ship John Parish, which sailed from that place 2d December. This Gentleman landed at Rinsale. He states that Scindia has rejected in toto all the overtures made to him and his adherents by Sir G. Barlow, in consequence of which the whole of the European forces had been marched up the country, on their way to the Upper Provinces.

This unfavorable event had naturally produced corresponding effects. The 6 per cent. paper of the Company had fallen to a discount of 12 per cent.

DOVERSTOWN, May 24

On the 23d of April, died in Chester county, a son of Mr. John Fell, aged between 4 and 5 years, in consequence of swallowing an old Jersey copper, which had lain in his stomach for thirteen months. The child often puked when taking his food, his feet and legs swelled frequently, and his body at length swelled to such a degree, that the skin cracked in several places, and a yellowish water issued therefrom. Medical assistance proved ineffectual, and the little sufferer was called Ho z.

This, and many other instances, should certainly excite parents and nurses to keep improper play-things out of the reach of children.

American, Commercial Daily Advertiser

FRIDAY, MAY 23, 1866

The ship George, Hamburg, in 150 days from Batavia, and the ship William Penn, Volans, in 120 days from Madras, have arrived at Philadelphia.

The Margaret, Heard, of Baltimore, for Tranquebar, was left at Batavia on the 13th of December last. The Sally of Baltimore was left at Amsterdam on the 21st of April, to sail in 2 days.

A schooner from Jamaica, for Baltimore, was spoken on the 10th inst. off Cape Florida. The brig Venus, from Baltimore, bound to Amsterdam, was spoken on the 19th April, in lat. 44, long. 47, 16 days out.

Captain Hafl, of the ship Actress, arrived at New York, states, that it was reported at Gibraltar, the 3d of April, that Sir Sidney Smith, was bound to Algiers, intending to bombard it.

COMMUNICATION

The establishment of a Mechanics' Bank, is what the mechanics generally wish. In a former communication some leading facts were stated relative thereto, which have not, and it is presumed, cannot be controverted; from whence it evidently appeared, that although all wished for the same thing, yet it so happened, through the influence of certain jealousies and fears, that an irregular step was taken by some, indicative of making more haste than good speed. In this critical situation of the business, nothing was of more importance, and nothing perhaps more difficult, than to preserve on both sides, a spirit of forbearance and moderation. Asperity and Acrimony mixed with pettinalities, it was feared would afford a momentary gratification to some, whilst their pens were dipping in gall, but that firebrands, arrows, and death would follow in their train; that wounds would be given, which would not easily be closed, and that eventually, some individual would be singled out, as the burst of just indignation, on whom would be wreaked the vengeance of many.

To preserve the Mechanics from such a state of hostility as this; to throw out the olive branch of peace; to invite to friendship and union a description of Citizens who could have but one interest, was the prevailing motive that occasioned the former essay, and pursuing the same course, a gleam of hope begins to dawn, and indicates, that this labor shall not be in vain.

It cannot but afford satisfaction, that an inclination now manifests itself on both sides to coalesce, the ground so hastily taken by some, now, upon calm and deliberate reflection, agreeably to the hope entertained, has begun to be abandoned, and the mechanics in Baltimore will yet "like a band of brothers join."

May this disposition be cherished, and that well known motto be impressed on every mechanic's mind, "United we stand, divided we fall." And let no one indulge in the liberty of misrepresenting any matter, or measure, or the motive of any person in any wise connected with the proposed institution. There is not there can be no doubt, but all the agents, in this business, are desirous to make its constitution as good and perfect as possible.

If a number of persons are to unite in any undertaking, it is plain to see, that if every one inflexibly adheres to his own particular views, nothing can be effected: no regulation; no institution whatever can be formed. The persons thus assembled must meet some where, must agree on some points, and then it remains to guard those points thus agreed on, as much as possible from abuse.

The Mechanics are therefore informed, that a constitution of a Mechanics' Bank, upon liberal principles, yet effectually preserving a preponderance of the Mechanics' interest is about to be laid before them. In forming which it is not to be expected that it will meet the entire approbation of every individual, yet it is believed to be liable to as few exceptions as could reasonably be expected. That it may promote the happiness, the union, and prosperity of the Mechanics of Baltimore, is the ardent wish of A FRIEND TO UNION.

FOR THE AMERICAN.

Mr. Pechin, THERE is some indelicacy in partially reporting cases while in hearing before
