

tion from the Maine that the king of the people are ready to join him as soon as he can effect a landing, which he can easily do with the reinforcement, he will receive here, which I suppose will be about 7 or 800.

The first attempt he made was very discouraging, for on his arrival at the Island of St. John with two gunboats, which attacked his two schooners, he fled with him, which they took, and I believe from the best information I can receive, it was by some mismanagement of the Lewis of the schooner, that they were taken; however, the whole affair remains an entire mystery how the two schooners should be taken, and the ship not far to windward; one of the schooners was the Ben of Philadelphia, commanded by Captain Huddle. Captain Lewis has either left the ship or has been taken; but I believe the latter; he is now at Barbadoes. The leader is now commanded by Captain Johnson, of New-Providence, and a fine man in my opinion, for such an expedition, as he has commanded a privateer this and the last war, cruising off the Island of Cuba.
