TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1806.

The complete publication of the ACT commenced this day, will render the files of the American a perfect record of all the Laws of the United States passed the last spssion of congress.

The papers received by this morning's mails were uncommonly barren—they neither afford marine nor other intelligence.

By Cap:ain Gray's Norfolk packet, arrived this morning, we received the Ledger of Friday, from which we have extracted the following articles.

I he Editor of this paper, has received a letter from a friend in Bordeaux, dated the 17th of August of which he offers his readers an extract, and he ventures to assure them that the writer is a person of intelligence, and respectability.

er I have had it in contemplation for some days past, to address you on the subject of the pending negotiations, between England and this country. They lately assumed a character, strongly indicative of an approaching peace; but the rumors have been so various and contradictory, and the sources of our informution so obscure and suspicious that I deemed it useless to offer intelligence, of which I could not guarantee the authenticity.

At the beginning of this month, the opimons of all classes of people were so universally in favour of peace, that preperations were absolutely made to receive and welcome the courier who was hourly expected to appear, and announce its conclusion. This impression was strengthened by the arrival of Lord Lauderdale at Calais, on the 3d instant, and at Paris on the 5th, and the erroneous reports of the frigate who brought him over having exchanged a salute of 21 guns with the battery of the former place, and of his lordship having been presented to the emperour on the 6th at the court of the Thuilleries. The first of these reports originated from the circumstance of the frigate having fired 15 guns when lord Lauderdale and his secretaries, Messrs. Stuart and Madison, came from slong side. I do not know to what cause the report of his presentation at court is to be attributed.

A very intelligent and well-informed correspondent wrote me on the 10th instant from Paris, stating that lord Lauderdale had been closeted three hours on the preceding wening with Mr. Champagny, minister of the Interior, and general Clarke, who enjoys the highest credit at the Court of St. Cloud. The result of this meeting was very different from what was at first conjectured. The object of the interview was to remove the obstacles which still divided the two Cabinets, but so far from its accomplishment, the breach is said to have been widened, and the official communication we have this day received from Paris, under date of the 13th inst.+ confirms this opinion. I transmit you herewith a copy of the note published by government, and extracted from the Moniteur of the 13th. It alludes to several important political events, but particularly to the ratification of the peace with Russia, the acknowledgment of the king of Holland and Naples, and Duke of Cleves and Berg, by the emperor of Austria and king of Prussis, and to the causes of the interruption of the negotiations between France & Great Britain. If I was to make a conjecture on the latter circumstance; I should attribute it to this government's insisting on some relexation on the maritime jurisprudence of England. It is very possible that one or the other governmense may publish the correspondence in which their respective interests and pretensions have been discussed, to render the public the arbiter of the justice and moderation of their conduct.

Sales in colonial produce have been nmost enficial anibended for the fret three weeks in consequence of the apprehension of peace. Three days ago, however a large; speculation, was inade in course for a pouse in Paris, who doubt Prince of peace at 53 and 64, sous, was legicle be, that the said ship, at the time f Octobe 20 bought at 56 and 57. 800 a les of Bourbon was sold at 55 sous, which a mouth ago was worth 61 1-2 sous .- Busines will not resume its activity before Lord Lauderdale leaves Paris. He is said to have demanded his passports which were not immediately granted—and it is asserted that he dispatched a courier to London on the 12th inst."

· According to the established etiquette, Lord Lauderdale could not be presented to the Emperor until after t treaty was signed; so says Journal de l'Empire of the 12th of August.
