The celerity with which he packed up his effects, and the anxiety which he difcovered about those most valuable, feem to indicate that the court of Helle has intimate relations with that of Prussa, and expess that war will break out immediately.

FRANKFORT, Sept. 9. The several French Commissaries, appointed by Prince Berthier for the purpose of assisting to the confederate princes their new possessions, have all arrived at their places of destination.

Letters from Hesse mention, that all the military on furlough, have been ordered to join their respective corps, and that the militia is embodied and organized, but that no further movements are observed among the Hessian troops. The same letter speaks of a representation, which had been made to the elector of Hesse of the advantages witch his cleetorste would derive by adhering to the contederacy of the Rhine. This proposition was tale n in o the serious consideration of i.i., highness. The following is a cepy of his letter to the president of the fenate and speaker file home of delegates, on accepting the appointment.

Annapolis, November 12, 1826. Gentlemen.

YOUR joint letter of the 10th infant, notifying me of my appointment as the governor of the trace of aryland, I received by express at my residence in Chester-town, at nali past twelve o'clock on the night of that day.

I accept the appointment with peculiar gratification, as I confider it the test of your approbation of my con ust in the office of fenator of the United States, which by your appointment I have held for the last five years, and in the difcharge of the duties whereof Thave most cordially co-operated with a virtuous administration in promoting the best interests of our common country, in repealing such laws as imposed odious and unnecessary taxes on our fellow-citizens; in reftoring the national judiciary to the state it had obtained in the time of our Washington; in the purchase of Leuisiana, and thereby extending to our western brethren the great advantages of the impostantport of Oileans, and the navigation of the Missouri with all its tributary areams; in the measures adopted to acquire the Floridas, that the American empire might be confolidated, and a risk of a collition with a colony of Spain avoided; in the cultivation of the arts of peace. with all our foreign relations, with temper and good faith, in an honest neutrality with all the belligerent powers, and in an exact difcharge of every duty imposed on us by existing treaties, or by the law of nations, and in the laudable attention that has been paid to our native brethren the favage tribes, in instructing them in the culture of the foil and domestic manufactures, and thereby inducing them to convert ther scalping-knives into pruning-hooks, and their tomaliawks into implements o husbandry, and both by precept and example teaching them to prefer the pacific clive to the bloody laurel.

Permit me to tender to yourselves and the honorable bodies over which you pretide, the ailifrances of my entire personal respect, and of my devotion to the principles of the American revolution, hallowed by the blood of her patriets, immelated on the alter of liberty.

I now relign my office of fenatorin the fenate Austerlitz, will with more facility surmount any of the United States; I will attend to qualify obstacle, that can be new placed in their way, at such time to-day as will be most agreeable and pais from the banks of the Rhine to the to your honors, and am, with great respect, gentlemen, your obedient servan,
