RAN away from the subscriber on Tuesday morning last, a young negro boy, named CASTILLO, about 12 or 13 years of age, lately from the Island of St. Croix, takes English; had on when he went away, a blue jacket, 2 pair of old blue trousers, a strip of shirt. It is supposed he is harbored by some of the free negroes on the Point. Five dollars will be given for apprehending him, if in the city of Baltimore, or out of the city ten, and if out of the state of Maryland fifty, and all reasonable charges paid. The above reward will be paid to any person that will secure him, so the subscriber may get him.

Ran Away

FROM the farm of the subscriber, the Fishinst, lying on the head of South River, Anne Arundel County, Maryland, in consequence of an engagement with their overseer, two young Negro Men, brothers, DAVID and BEN.

DAVID, the elder brother, a mulatto, aged 22, five feet six or eight inches high, well made, a peasant countenance, speaks quick, and walks briskly; he has a scar under his right eye, occasioned a few years past, from a blow received from the overseer, and had, I believe, when he absconded, several other wounds received the day he made his escape. BEN, aged 20, about 5 feet 5 or 8 inches high, a dark mulatto, stout and well made, his countenance more sullen than that of his brother, has occasionally an impediment in his speech, and the mark of a cherry on one of his cheeks, which is not at this time so blooming as in the months of May and June.

Their clothing when they eloped, consisted, each, of a white country coat-jacket and trousers, a white waistcoat, white shirt, white woollen stockings, and coarse leather shoes, with nails in them.

It is very probable they may have changed their clothes, as they have a brother living in Annapolis, blacksmith, by the name of William Pratt, and also a brother in Baltimore, Richard Pratt, both free; David has also wife living in Annapolis, at Mr. Highbothom's. Any person apprehending said Negroes, within ten miles of the city of Annapolis, shall be entitled to a reward of 20 dollars; if at the distance of 20 or 40 miles, within the state, 40 dollars, and if taken without the state a reward of 100 dollars shall be given. The said Negroes to be brought home or secured in the Annapolis jail.

JOSEPH HOWARD.

N. B. All owners of vessels are forbid taking on board said negroes at their peril.

THE SECOND EDITION,

IN TWO VOLUMES,
OF

"NATURE DISPLAYED,

IN HER MODE OF

Teaching Language to Man:

"Applied to the French."

Price to subscribers 5 dollars—to non-subscribers 6 dollars in boards.

Those who have not read the above work, which is almost unparalleled in the annals of Literature for the success it has met with, notwithstanding the new doctrines it inculcates, will reap great pleasure in making acquaintance with its objects.

IT CONTAINS,

1. A complete refutation of the method of teaching a language by the rules of Grammar, pointing out the errors and absurdities of that system and its ill effects on the human mind; also, a display of that natural method applied to the French language, by the help of which we all successfully learn our native tongue, consisting of the phrases made use of by the French in the social communications, to which their various wants and pleasures give rise, clasped in a manner strictly analytical.

This part of the work which gives the solution of a problem highly conducive to the future advancement of education, precludes the necessity of going to reside among the French, in order to acquire their language; a circumstance which the old method required as it never taught the speaking of any language (see "Nature Displayed, preliminary discourse") but it is possible that it could teach the written language, of which it so much boasts in order to make up for the above

Fundamental deficiency? No! as the written language is grounded solely on the spoken language, or rather is nothing but the spoken language, brought to a certain degree of perfection.

Common sense, observation and experience inform us, that to be successful in our mental acquirements, we must proceed invariably from the simple to the compound, from the physical to the abstract, from the known to the unknown, under the penalty of reaching, after a very long and painful journey, the dreary waste of absurdity and nonsense.

Could we help smiling at the wild attempt of a profound mathematician who would undertake to teach the Newtonian fluctuations to a person entirely unacquainted with arithmetic and algebra? Let us therefore infer that the old method, which can never teach the spoken language of the French, is utterly inadequate to the teaching of their written language.

Astonished at an assertion so novel, many will exclaim, what do they teach then? Our answer is, without the least dread of contradiction that, by the old method, after several years toil and drudgery, a kind of gibberish or bastard anglo French may be acquired, which every native of France would listen to with disgust, and feel ashamed to a knowledge.

The history of the simple means by which rude and uninformed man, proceeded to the formation of language, a work that throws light on the science of words, in its connection with that of ideas, and facilitates the study of the best metaphysicians—the principles therein developed, are applied to the French language, respecting which, several particular set down, such is the conjugation of verbs, embracing an ingenious and extensive classification of every French word.

3. The syntax simplified and made plain by substituting new rules instead of the old, many of which are scarcely intelligible—it appears mostly intended to what a celebrated reviewer has said of it—"it contains," says the writer, "a body of instruction, digested in a more luminous method, and comprehending a greater number of particulars, than are found in any work extant."—To this eulogium it may be added, says another reviewer, "that the subject is sometimes presented in a point of view so perfect, that the dryness of grammar at most is here found to excite a interest that few could think it capable of."

4. The Lecteur Français, or a numerous collection of elegant extracts, in prose and verse—particularly calculated to give the last assistance to the acquirement of the French language, on the principles developed in the work. Several of these pieces cannot fail to be particularly gratifying to the citizens of our country; such as the dialogue in the Imitation of Washington from the pen of Fortune, or several pieces descriptive of the stupendous magnificence & energy of the new world.

This addition of the Lecteur Français will be highly beneficial to every French learner; for in possession of this work, he needs no other than a small French and English dictionary.

Learning French by the shortest method possible is not the only advantage derivable from the method of nature. It also facilitates the acquisition of every other language, by the establishment of a universal model; and often removes the memory by extracting in a simple yet subtle manner, that noble faculty of the mind, while the judgment is improved and navigated by a method founded on analysis and analogy, our guide in the art of thinking.

Observation has fully proved that those who have learned French by the new mode, have obtained much facility in their other studies.

Subscribers who have obtained from us the first vol. will receive a second.

GEO. DOBBIN & MURPHY.

This eulogium, though written by a foreigner, has been allowed by Americans well acquainted with the language, to be a correct delineation of its character; it is however written with the grammar and majesty of Bossuet, and is therefore a model of style.

This day is finished,

AN ADDITION OF

6000 Spelling Books,

From the 4th and best English edition.

BY LINDLEY MURRAY.

Author of English Grammar, Introduction to English Grammar, English Reader, Exercises, &c. &c.

The above work is comprehended under three general divisions. One of the principal objects of the first part, is, to teach the study of the best metaphysicians—the principles therein developed, are applied to the French language, respecting which, every native of France would listen to with disgust, and feel ashamed to a knowledge.

The second part of the work affords the learner considerable aid in pronunciation, as well as in orthography. The words of two syllables are not only classed in chapters, according to their accent, but they are arranged in sections, adapted to the sounds of vowels and diphthongs, whether short, long, middle or broad.

The third part consists of words less familiar to the student than those of the preceding parts, or more difficult to spelling and pronunciation; and in seeking an alphabet, calculated to give the learner a rational knowledge, and a good review of the subject.

The lesson for spelling, in every section, is illustrated by short appropriate reading lessons. The orthography of shar, and the common case of Widder have been adopted in Murray's Spelling Book; and it is presumed they are judicious which few persons will be inclined to dispute.

Just received,

2000 copies of a New Spelling Book, called

THE PRINCIPAL DUTCH WORDS, OR

SCHOOL BOOK, IMPROVED.

The present edition being on the same plan of a late Glasgow publication (with considerable improvements) is confidently recommended to the serious attention of teachers, parents and guardians.
