Notice is hereby given,
TO the mean fellow, who some days ago left a letter at the post-office without the signature of his name to it, addressed to H. T. for the base and malicious purpose of propagating lies, and irritating the minds of such persons as hold it below their dignity to attend either to his printer or printer, that he has missed his aim entirely, and at least thus far, has turned his own weapons of base flattery against himself, as to be a slanderer for no purpose, and a base table reptile in the dark, whose strivings to sting, honest men laugh at. If, after this, he should want to make another dart of such a nature, he is advised to put on another pair of spectacles, and carefully cautioned to look out well who he aims at, lest he may come through an honest man's heel, and descend into the crushed down in the filthy mud he creeps and gathers his poison in.
