RICHMOND, March 31

ARREST OF AARON BURR.

We have taken particular pains to ascertain the correctness of the account of Col. B.'s arrest, which we detailed in our last paper. We have conversed with his Executor, and it is with pleasure that we have discovered the first account to be much more accurate than we could have dared to expect. The following statement is however more complete, more correct, more trustworthy.

He was arrested on the morning of the 19th of February, instead of the 3rd of March.

We have obtained a sketch of that part of the country, from the hands of one of the officers from which the eye can at once understand the relative situation of places, to each other, to the Spanish line, and to the road leading to the Atlantic states. It is certainly impossible by any kind of description in words to lay these particulars before the reader; but a few remarks may at least elucidate the more interesting points; particularly if they will accompany these remarks by a reference to Bradley's late Edition of his map of the U. S.

The town of Natchez, in the Mississippi Territory, where A. Burr's boats were deposited, is on the river Mississippi.

About two hundred miles to the east of this river is the Tombigbee river; which with the Alabama river, conspire to form the Mobile.
The Tombigbee is the western, the Alabama the eastern branch. Four miles below the point of confluence, is Fort Stoddart, situated on the Mobile; and about 12 miles above the Spanish Florida line.—A body of water connects the Tombigbee and Alabama branches, at a certain distance above the point of confluence, and forms an island; or as it has been called, a creek cut.

A tortuous leads over the Tombigbee, into this island; through this island the road runs to a ferry over the Alabama; thence the road leads to the east of the Alabama to a certain point; where the road diverges in two directions. The one road leads to the east through the Creek Country, over the hills of Georgia, into the Atlantic states.
The other sweeps to the south, crosses the Spanish line, and thence advances to Pensacola.

And here is the principal point in dispute.
A. Burr is said to have stated that his route lay through the Creek country into Georgia.
Some people suppose that his route was through the Foothills road. According to his own reported representation, he intended to remain within the jurisdiction of the U. S. and to make an expedition against the dominions of the wrecks, who were then the United States without regard to peace."

"It was his original intention, to have a public discussion should be held in the Capital, this was at 12 o'clock, and in the mean time, Col. Burr was to be bound to the sum of $5,000 dollars.

Moys, Thomas Taylor and John Gamble are his counsellors.

As this affair is a present drama, we shall limit our attention to facts alone, without wandering into complaints.—On these, though not materially different from the one which was treated in our paper,

This reflection which followed it in Mr.
Perkins' mind, were in some respect different from what we have related. It was not known as telling robbers, that these冥冥者 appeared to his imagination the idea and occurred to him, that one of them might be Col.
Burr. This idea was the result of a visit he had received from a member of the legislative council at Sanchez, relating the escape of Col. Burr, and the probability that exists of his passing through Mr. P.'s village—but whether they were robbers or one of them was a robber, he failed to make out an important matter to be passed into neglect. He determined to report to the port of Baltimore. He was accompanied by his friend the Sheriff of the county. They reached the sheriff's house about 12 o'clock. The mysterious strangers had arrived before them.
Aldie was in the yard. Col. Burr was in the house.

It is difficult to repeat the different parts of this interview. It is sufficient to say, that every circumstance which occurred, contributed to give new countenance to Mr. P.'s suspicion.

The mysterious stranger could be no other than Col. Burr, and under this impression, which he carried, kept to himself, he determined to report to Fort Stoddart, and obtain the assistance of Lieutenant Gaines to examine the strangers.

Day was breaking before he arrived at Fort Stoddart.

Neither Mr. P. nor Lieutenant Gaines were personally acquainted with Col. Burr, and theirs knew him not.

"Let us examine them however," said Mr. P. "Is neither of them prove to be Col. Burr, and the one I suspect to be a gentleman, he will immediately be set free."—The other was blotted out.

Three men were sent to the sheriff's house.

They were to apprehend the strangers, and bring them to the sheriff's office.
