

introduced, summoned the House to the House of Peers. The measure has succeeded to a certain extent. It has prevented the formal presentation of the Report, and consequently all possibility of its becoming, as such, a subject of Parliamentary discussion.

The Report, as we understand, states in substance, that a sum of 19,800,000 had been applied by a late Paymaster of the Forces to his own use, and that the fact came to the knowledge of his Colleague, who did not give any direction to the Clerk on the subject. It also states, that the Committee had discovered other and great abuses in the public money concern, on which they should shortly proceed to report. This according to the rumours which were circulated yesterday in both Houses, is supposed to allude to a further discovery of public plunder, an enquiry into which would have involved personages high in station and in office.

OF TURKEY.

Government are in hourly expectation of the arrival of dispatches from Admiral Duckworth. There is a mystery in his proceedings before Constantinople which must continue inexplicable until they arrive. He was furnished with ample means of destroying the town; his instructions were positive, and so full as to suit every possible exigency. Even the number of minutes during which he was to wait for an answer to the proposals transmitted to the Divan, was specified.

EXPECTED ARMISTICE.

No intelligence from the Continent has reached us this morning. It is a prevailing opinion that an Armistice has taken place between the armies in Poland.

SPECK OF PEACE.

It was rumored yesterday that a cartel had arrived from France, and that some pacific proposal had been made to our government. Stocks in consequence experienced a rise. We cannot find out, however, that any communication has been made from the French to our government. There was a rumour too last night, an unfounded one, we believe, of an armistice between Russia and France.

Accounts from various parts of the continent agree, that during the late cessation of military movements some negotiations for a peace were entered into—and in fact they go so far as to state, that an armistice had absolutely been concluded; but this needs confirmation.

POLITICAL RETROSPECT.

No intelligence of any importance has been received from the Continent. Paris Papers to the 17th, and Dutch to the 22d inst. have come to hand, they contain the 69th Bulletin of the French army, dated at Finckenstein on the 4th. It states that not a shot had been fired at the advanced posts during the fifteen preceding days. It is supposed that this suspension of active hostilities is connected in some degree with the negotiations for Peace, which are said to be carrying on at M. mel, as it were in the presence of the King of Prussia and the Emperor of Russia, who have been for some time at that place. Both armies have received considerable reinforcements. The French are making the most active preparations. They continue to drain the country behind them of every disposable man in order to strengthen themselves for a conflict, which, should it take place, will be decisive of the fate of Europe. In the event of the result of this conflict being against them, they are putting the fortresses they possess on the Vistula in the most effectual state of defence, while they continue to push the sieges of Dantzig and Colberg with increased activity. The contending powers must now be able to estimate their ability to do each other all the mischief originally intended, and by this time must be heartily tired of a contest, calculated to produce ruin and destruction to all the parties engaged in it.

The real state of British affairs at Constantinople is involved in the thickest veil of mystery; no official accounts have been received from Admiral Duckworth, and the whole of the accounts of the British fleet having passed out of the Straits, must be mere rumor and conjecture.

The Russian Emperor Alexander has certainly reached Memel; and his brother, the Archduke Constantine, King of Prussia, immediately on their joining the army it was expected some general movement would take place. The King of Prussia was also at Memel.

The Russian and French armies are not more than 25 German miles distant from each other.

Great hopes were entertained that Austria would shortly speak from the degrading restraint under which she has been long held by France.

The Swedes are said to have taken the field with considerable force—and already to have possessed themselves of Rostock, Prenzlau, and several other places.

The spirit of conduct of Sweden has not only produced the important event of causing the French to raise the siege of Stralsund, but likewise the complete expulsion of the French from the whole of Swedish Pomerania. The particulars of these events have been officially announced to our government.

The accounts from Vienna are to the 5th. The Emperor had set out on the preceding day, for Buda, to meet the Hungarian Diet; after which it was supposed he would proceed to visit the Austrian Cordons upon the frontiers. The Archduke was expected to follow him in a few days.

The Decree for calling out the conscription of 1808, is executed with uncommon rigour and dispatch throughout the different departments of France. All attempts to evade it are punished with unexampled severity. The lists or registers are all to be completed by the end of April. The actual enrolment and march to the frontiers will not be delayed long after.

It is now to be credited to the reports from the conscripts received through French channels, we should be inclined to believe that the expedition through the Dardanelles had completely failed; but when we reflect on the character of the officer entrusted with that important affair, and on the knowledge we now possess, that he was to waste but one hour in negotiation; and after that period, if not successful, to bombard the capital, we doubt the truth of them all. It is also well known that he received a considerable reinforcement of ships.

The report of a pacific negotiation having been opened between Russia and Prussia on the one part, and France on the other, can have little foundation in truth, as on the contrary we find, that new levies of troops, and new supplies of arms, are daily sent off to the Russian Grand Army—that Sweden has taken an active part in the war; and Austria expected to throw her weight into the scale.

Every thing is in motion along the naval ports. A squadron at Harwich is in motion, and immediately expected to sail on some important service. The 70th and 92d regiments are to embark on board the fleet.

There is no doubt but our government will immediately take possession of Hamburg. The Dutch (French) troops at that place are not numerous—and greatly dissatisfied with the conduct of the French.

A great dearth of provisions is said to prevail in the Republic of the Seven Islands.

Our Dover letter states that a heavy firing took place on the opposite French coast on Saturday evening, but the cause was unknown. A circumstance of this kind always excites considerable interest, as the French announce their victories and other important events in this way.

It is the intention of Ministers, to entirely abolish the new financial system introduced by Lords Grenville and Henry Petty, and to revive the old system.

A correspondence has taken place between Mr. Secretary Conroy and Mr. Munroe, in which the former is authorized thus officially to state the disapprobation of the Admiralty at the conduct of certain British Commanders, in having warned some American ships from entering the port of Antwerp.

NATIONAL FRIENDSHIP.

On Saturday last a very elegant dinner was given at the London Tavern, by the British merchants, trading to North America, to Mr. Munroe, the minister from the United States of America.

The company was very numerous and highly respectable—among the visitors were, Mr. Pinckney, (who it is understood is to succeed Mr. Munroe,) the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lords Mulgrave, Castlereagh and Erskine—Sir William Scott, Mr. Canning, Mr. Rose, &c.

Philip Sanson, Esq. the Chairman of the Committee of American Merchants who presided on the occasion, filled the chair with great ability, and to the highest gratification of the company. The day was passed with the utmost harmony and good humor, and at the same time with a degree of order which has seldom been witnessed on such occasions.

The Toasts were—
The King. The Queen. The Prince of Wales, &c.

And the following from the Chairman, were received with bursts of applause, as particularly appropriate to the object of the meeting:—
The President of the United States of America.
Perpetual friendship between Great Britain and the United States of America.
Mr. Munroe—Mr. Pinckney.
The Honorable Mr. Erskine, the British Minister to the United States of America.

Upon the health of Mr. Munroe being given, that gentleman addressed the company in a feeling, energetic speech, expressive of the high sense he had of the compliment paid to him, and of the pleasure he felt at the unanimity that prevailed.

Mr. Pinckney, also, upon his health being drunk, addressed the company in an eloquent speech, expressing similar sentiments.

Before the visitors withdrew, Mr. Canning, the Secretary of Foreign Affairs, gave the following toast:—
May the British and Americans never meet on terms less friendly than they have done this day.

Which was drunk with the utmost satisfaction.

The situation which the military affairs of the continent stood at our last date, renders it pretty certain, that a great and decisive battle has taken place ere this. Report is busy in stating the fact, and numbering the loss of the French, in killed alone, at 30,000 men; but this we do not credit. Rumor also states, that Jerome Bonaparte has been surprised and taken prisoner by the Prussians.

The houses of Hope, Willink & Co. have agreed to furnish the Dutch government with a loan of 49,000,000 of ducats. The contractors, it is said, are to be permitted to carry on a trade with England, in certain articles of commerce, hitherto prohibited by the government of Holland.

NEWBURYPORT, June 11.

The following directions are published for the benefit of Mariners bound for this port.

When there is a large sea on the bar, and the pilots cannot get out, the following Signals, Lights and Directions must be observed.

1. When a vessel comes into the Bay, and cannot come over the bar at high water owing to insufficiency of the tide, a red square flag will be hoisted up at the flag-staff on Plum Island, near the entrance of the harbour, and a pendant under it, and as soon as those signals are seen by the vessel in the bay, she must try for some other port.
2. When the usual signals for vessels are kept up, the vessel must lay off and on at the bar, keeping to windward until the red square flag is hoisted half mast, she must then come in, keeping the lights in range. When the Pendant is hoisted half mast, the lights must be kept a little open to the Southward.
3. When a vessel is seen in the bay, which does not come in before night, the following lights must be observed:—
For a vessel to keep off, a lantern will be hoisted to the top of the flag-staff.—When it is a proper time for her to come over the bar during the night, two lanterns will be hoisted, 1 at the top of the flag-staff, and one at half mast. The vessel must then lay off and on at the bar, until a light is made in the eastern light-house, at a window about eight feet below the lantern; the vessel must then come over the bar, keeping the lights in range, and when abreast of the upper light will find good anchorage.

He had dispatched an express to Richmond the Wednesday preceding, which it was expected would reach there on Thursday before the opening of the court.

It was believed at Norfolk that the French privateer which is stated in this day's American as having captured the British brig Ceres, as well as the latter, had been retaken by the British—two vessels answering to the description having been seen in possession of the Melampus off the Capes of Virginia by Capt. Gardner arrived at Norfolk from Nevis on the 12th inst.
