American,

Commercial Daily Advertiser.

TUBSDA1, NOVE WSER 17, 1807.

The friends of the American are informed that no change shall be permitted to take place on the establishment, which can injure its claim to the extensive support with which it is now honored. A recent loss of aid may burthen the editor with a greater weight of duty; but he is confident that the evertion and industry which will be consequent there's on, will render him capable of furnishing complete satisfaction. However, he is well convinced, from former experience, that the entire superintendence of a Daily morning print is a duty severe in the extreme-and under such impression, he would make a sale of One Half the establishment of the American, including materials, for the sum of eleven thousand five hundred dollars, to be paid in mauner, as may be agreed on; provided a partner should offer, whose moral, political and professional character should be ap proved of. The present proprietor will either perform the in-door or out-door business, as would best suit the qualifications or disposition of the purchaser.

With such as are acquainted with the establishment, it is unnecessary to urge the superior advantages which the Americau mossesses as an advertising paper, without.! taking into view its exclusive business, of a public nature. Another important consideration, which gives it preeminence, is, its extenerculation, in point of subscribers, being Stout one eighth more than that of any other p per printed in this city. It is only necessary to add that, to any person disposed to purchase, the editor can attest, to satisfaction, as to the advantages just hinted at.
