January 5. A gentleman from New-York informs us, that Capt. Grindle, in a flag of truce from Leoganne, arrived there last Friday, and brought advice, that 100 sail of merchantmen, and one man of war of the Rochelle fleet, were arrived in Hispaniola.

By a letter from Capt. Bowne, of the privateer brig. Trembleur, of this place, we learn, That on the first of November last, he fell in with, and took a Spanish privateer sloop, of six carriage guns, six pounders, 12 swivels, with blunderbusses, and 140 men, after a very obstinate engagement; the enemy, when they struck, not having one sail or rope left whole, and their boom and bowsprit shot to pieces. Captain Bowne had but 89 men when he engaged the privateer, whereof one was killed; his sails and rigging were much damaged; he carried the prize into St. Thomas's, and was going to cruise off of Martinico, in company with the Castor of New York, to wait for a French fleet daily expected, probably that from Rochelle.

Our river is so far open, that the following vessels, with much faculty, are got up to town, viz. The Ship Catharine, Capt. Moore, from Cape-Breton; a brig. and sloop from Bolton; captains Pitts and Airy; and the brig. Recovery, Joseph Greenway, from Barbados. Capt. Gaudin is arrived at Wilmington from St. Eustatia; and the Captains Green and Lee, both from the same place, are below: And by a gentleman, passenger in one of them, we have the following account, viz. That the governor of Eustatia had received advice, that from Antigua and St. Kitts, that Admiral Hawk, had taken the following men of war, convoy to the fleet of merchantmen from Rochelle, viz. Le Neptune, 74 guns; Le Grand Omarch, 74 guns; Le Terrible, 74 guns; Le Déesse, 64 guns; Constant, 64 guns; and the Severn, of 50 guns: That a ship of 84 guns, and another of 74, had put back to France in shattered condition; and that a ship of 64 guns, and a frigate, proceeded with the merchantmen for the West-Indies: That the admiral immediately upon this, dispatched a snow to Antigua, and the other islands, to let the men of war and privateers know what he had done, that they might be upon the point for the fleet: That accordingly both men of war and privateers were out, and had taken about twenty sail of the said

Monday last nine companies of the Associators of this city, and of Myamensing, having chosen their officers for the ensuing year, marched up, and met at the state-house; where the president and council were sitting, who immediately granted the commissions: The officers then withdrawing in a room by themselves, elected Abraham Taylor, Esq. Colonel, Thomas Hodge, Esq. Lieutenant-Colonel, and Samuel M'Cally, Esq. Major of the Regiment: which soon after began to march through the town, to the court-house, in Market-street, where it was divided up into three divisions, and after three general discharges each division separated, each captain leading off his own company. The whole was performed with the greatest order and regularity, and without occasioning the least disturbance. Some of the companies exceed 400 men each, and most of them had but little short of that number. On the same day the Angles company met at Jenkins's ferry, and chose their officers. Several other companies of Associators in the neighbouring towns met also; but the accounts of their elections are not yet come to hand.
