

WHEREAS Thomas Figget, of the City of Annapolis, Taylor, was unjustly suspected of being concerned in the Attempt made to rob the House of Mr. Charles Coie, of the said City, Merchant, in the Night of the 2d of July last; whereby the said Figget has been very much prejudiced in his Way of Business: But as the two only Persons concerned in the said Villainy are now in the Public Goal of this City, and their Guilt confirmed by the voluntary surrender and Confession of one of the said Parties, and his impeaching his Accomplice (who has been since apprehended); the said Figget therefore humbly hopes, that, as the Injustice of such Suspicion is thereby sufficiently evinced, all such Gentlemen as have heretofore employ'd him will be so kind as to continue their Favours; and he hereby assures them of being faithfully and expeditiously served, in the best and cheapest Manner, by

Their obliged humble Servant,
THOMAS FIGGET.
