PAST CIVILIZATIONS. There have been some half dozen great civilizations within the memory of man. There have been the Roman, the Persian, the Greek, the Assyrian, and the Egyptian, and each and all of them have ceased to exist under the same circumstances. The Roman Empire attained a stability and organization which well might promise to be eternal. Even in the time of Caracalla it seemed sound in every part of its immense frame, and likely to compete with the solid fabric of nature. Yet within a century or two afterward, hordes of Goths and Huns, whom a few years before no one knew even by name, were trampling on the tombs of Cæsar and the Antonies. The Persian Empire, for Oriental vastness and the awe which such splendor creates, seemed once so permanent that folly alone could predict its ruin. Yet down swept an unexpected cataclysm of semi-barbarous Macedonians, and Persia was no more. The Assyrians, in the decline of their power, were yet the undisputed princes of Asia. Who would have thought that Babylon could become a desert that night when the barbarian Cyrus knocked at its gates? Egypt, with all its wealth, all its learning, and all its commerce, was in a moment overrun by wild maranders, with Cambyses at their head, and not a vestige of its power was left. The great Greek Empire of Byzantium, after lasting a thousand years, and regarding it as a continuation of elder civilization, enduring for nearly double that time, seemed, indeed, to have its dissolution indefinitely delayed, in order that the event might come about in the strictly orthodox form of the human drama.-It had outlived the furies which beset the Empire of the West. Even the Saracens hurled themselves at it in vain. It was like to be an imperial prodigy, as a man who lives on, empowered with an immunity from death, a monster, a portent, an unnatural being, whom death has forgotten and all men point at with horror. But the end came—the death of a civilization; its only way to leave the world—in the inroad

FACT AND FANCY. A compositor on a paper in Baltimore once was setting a report of a Decoration Day address in which occurred the sentence: "Officers and privates furled their battle flags." This is the way he interpreted it: "Officers and privates folded their both legs."

and overwhelming by the barbarian Turks.

The Gentleman's Magazine.

A young man who was married at Burlington, Iowa, the other night gave the officiating clergyman a ten-dollar gold piece by mistake for a two-dollar-and-a-half coin, and went to the preacher's residence in the middle of the night and demanded restitution. He got it.

The law is supposed to be just. Down East a woman's husband some time ago was killed by the cars and she received $5,000. Time went on and a thoughtless millionaire played with her affections, and in a breach of promise the same court granted her five times the amount as a proper amount to soothe her aching heart.

A gentleman stepped into a city market and looking around inquired how it was that there were no ducks on hand. "Oh! We never Office of TREASURER AND COLLECTOR OF TAXES have ducks on Monday," said Mr. McGuire. who is ready at repartee. "Why not?" asked the customer. "Oh, we sell all we have left on

Mrs. Veneering-Really, my dear doctor, you must come to my ball. It is Lucy's comingout affair, you know, and I shall take no refusal; none at all. Doctor Bygfee-Well, you see, my dear Madam, I am a very busy man. My time is not my own. Mrs. Veneering-Say no Include the visit in your bill. I shall expect you. Good-bye. A Boston woman registering to vote gave her age as "21 plus." "What do you mean by '21 plus?"" inquired the Registrar. "I mean, Sir. that I am over 21," was the tart reply. "We cannot allow any of that nonzense here," said the official: "you must give your exact age if you desire to be registered." This she persistently declined to do, and her name is not on

At a recent meeting of the Red Jacket Monument Committee, Percy Wood, the sculptor, in speaking of the four statues ornamenting the tower of the City Hall, said they were too high up in the air-no person could tell what they are supposed to represent. John Blocher, a member of the committe, subsequently said: "I could tell Mr. Wood what they represent.

They represent about $20,000." A gentleman said yesterday that his negro attendant came to him during the day declaring that in a dream there had been revealed to him three numbers which would surely win in the lottery. To humor the boy's evident sincerity, or rather to prove that dreams go by contraries, the gentleman gave the negro s half dollar. After a little while the negro re-dreamed of the three lucky numbers. A scheme has been devised for making church socials pleasant. Each person is given a card on which a dozen names are written, and is required to talk five minutes with each one whose name is on the card. At the expiration of five minutes a bell is struck and a new partner is sought. By this plan wall flowers are eliminated, overybody receives attention, eliques are broken up, and all go home happy. It isn't exactly progressive euchre, but it is built on the same plan.

ADVICE TO A YOUNG WIFE. - Young Wife-"I'm afraid my husband isn't well. These cold mornings seem to be a strain on his nervous system somehow. He's dreadfully cross at breakfast, and he often leaves the house without kissing me. What would you advise me

Reservenced Matron--"Try sausage and buck wheel states." curiosity in this age is so short lived that where it took years and years for jokes to grow stale in past days, now a story is a chestnut before you can get around the corner to tell it to the first fellow you meet.
