Oh love, if life should end to-night, How short our life would seem! One little flash of Summer light; One brief and passionate dream: One glimpe of roses on the wall, Or blue-bells in the lane, Then, love, the end, the end of all-

The stream we used to watch and love Would ever onward flow: Would call—we should not know. Ah! not for us the pines would wave, For us no stream would run: We should be silent in the grave,

Yet is not this a sombre view Of life and all it brings? Thank Heaven, the bright waves still are blue, And still the throstle sings! And oh, before love's conquering song Death's voice sinks quite away : For life is short, but love is long, And death is fierce, but love is strong,

The Bee As A Dispatch Bearer.

An experiment has been made in England which has resulted in proving that bees fly faster than carrier pigeons; in fact, that the little, insignificant looking, hot-footed bee can beat the handson,est pigeon home in five cases out of six. This being the case the future must witness the supplanting of carrier pigeons by carrier bees. The latter have much to recommend them for this purpose. A carrier bee will be hard to hit. A marksman that would bring down a pigeon would utterly fail to hit a bee. Then there is nothing in a pigeon's tail to inspire the respect of a foe. There is in a messages by a bee would be a matter pre-Presently the bell rang, and after that senting no obstacles.
