THE STATE'S ATTORNEYSHIP.

As many persons are under a misapprohension as to the appointment of Maj. John I. Yellott as State's Attorney, it is proper to state that the appointment was ad interim-that is, until the election in November, and Mr. Yellott has accepted the appointment in accordance therewith. Judges Fowler and Burke did not think it proper to make an appointment for a time longer than they themselves had been appointed as Judges by Gov. Jackson. After the election a State's Attorney will be appointed for the balance of the time of Mr. Burke, or until January 1st, 1892.

FIVE MURDERERS HANGED.

It is not often five persons are hanged in one prison on the same day—but such was the fact yesterday 23d, when five brutes in human form paid the penalty of their lives for murder, being hanged at the Tombs, New York. Four o them had murdered their wives. There were two gallows, three being hanged on one and two on the other.

SULLIVAN TO GO TO JAIL.

The Court at Purvis, Miss., having convicted John L. Sullivan of prize fighting at Richburg, he was sentenced to 12 months in jail and pay the costs, which are $500. Sullivan's counsel took an appeal to a higher Court and gave bail in the sum of $1,000 to appear when wanted. He then left for New York.

Althea Hill sued Sharon for a portion of his es-

United States Court. Sarah married Terry, and this is how he came to be connected with the case. As Terry had several times said he would kill Justice Field when he met him, Attorney General Miller instructed the United States Marshal for California to take the necessary precautions to protect the person of Justice

Field. The Marshal directed a deputy named Nagle to accompany the Justice. Terry was known as a brutal, desperate man, having killed two or three persons. When Terry and his wife came into the dining room where Justice

Field was and saw him, she at once returned to her room to get her satchel, in which was a pistol. She saw her husband slap Justice Field. Deputy Nagle also witnessed the assault, and knowing the character of Terry and fearing he would do the Justice further harm, drew a pistol and shot Terry, the ball passing through his heart. Subsequently, Sarah sued out a warrant for Justice Field's arrest upon her husband. The arrest took place, a day or two after the occurrence, the Justice entering in $5,000 bail. Deputy Nagle was also arrested but was afterwards released on $1,000 bail.-

Justice Field knew the desporate character of Terry, and was preed by his brother Cyrus

Just now, in the hush of expectation, while we are waiting for the blare of trumpets, or its equivalent, which will usher in the annual fesivities of the County Fair, and the great parades and spectacular representations of our own gorgeous Exposition, while we have a little time left to devote to the consideration of abstract questions, it may be of interest to some of the JOURNAL's many intelligent and esthetic readers to peruse another chapter from the records of "Antediluvian Antiquities," from which this correspondence has once or twice before made copious extracts. tate, but was denied it upon appeal to the

The Book of Records is an odd one, sixty years old, and so far as the present writer i aware, it is the only copy extant. It purports to be a genuine translation of fragments that have come down from a remote antiquity; and so, it is interesting as a testimony to the fact that human nature remains the same throughout the ages, and that its tragedies continue to repeat themselves among mankind from generation to generation. The following narrative is culled from its pages, as a specimen of antediluvian temptations and their consquences, which the world does not seem, even yet to have quite outgrown; and the quaintness of the romantic recital makes it a sort of simple prose poem which is at least artistically attractive. "Beyond the river Aphak, in the great plain f the west, there is a wood of pleasant trees, planted by Ezel. In the midst of the grove here are three tombs of grey stone, and eleven graves of earth. Ezel, the son of Adam, was an evil man. He did not slay his brother, like Cain, neither did he repent of his evil eeds, as Cain had done. At the age of one hundred years, he departed from the city of Adam, and was followed by some of his brothers and sisters, and by some of their sons and the charge of being accessory to the death of daughters, to the land of the west, even nigh unto the border of the sea that is salt.

"Bethzanak came again from the wilderness at midnight, and climbed up to the top of the great sycamore tree, and sleptamong the leaves f the boughs. Her spirit was dark in the light of the morning. Her garments were torn n pieces in her walks among the briars of the lesert, and the fragments of her garments were in her eyes as the wings of eagles. souls, that only evil cometh of the worship of idols. We have been taught the knowledge of man shall cleave unto his wife; for he did not take unto himself a wife, no, not in all the days and gone after idols, that are no gods. Shall a young man whose beard upon his lips is soft as the first feathers of the little doves, teach his brethren and sisters the knowledge of the gods? Is it right that the priest should seek to do evil? Will not God punish all evil-doers? Hath not not eleven of our little ones been taken from us and returned to the ground? And hath any other child of Adam returned unto the dust of the earth, save Abel only, whom Cain slew? like a lion thou hast taken a lamb from the fold, and hast slain it at the altar of thy gods. shall the lamb die, and the lion that slew the lamb live? Hear, ye gods, if ye have cars!

Speak, if ye have tongues! 'There was tumult among the people. They shouted aloud as it were the voice of thunder, and said,-Who will say that God hath not given unto woman great power of the tongue? Is not Eve elequent as one of the angels that of her age. shouted in the song of the first stars of the morning? Doth not Phardizah speak well? Is not her mouth the mouth of truth? How long shall we wership gods of wood, and sacrifice to images of stone? Have not our souls peen as dark as a night without stars? "Then the tumult became great. And the neople stood around the graves of the eleven children that had died in the day of the pestilence. They shouted like the sound of the river when it falleth down the rock. Destruction to idols! Death to the priest of the gods!

Let the images lie as low as the Serpent in the dust! "Ezel would have spoken to the people; but the voice of the people scattered the words of his mouth, as the whirlwind scattereth the branches of the trees of the mountain. Then Ezel and Iraph fought together with branches of trees, with stones of the plain, and with strength of their arms. And when Iraph prevailed over Ezel, and his face was covered with blood, he called aloud for help, but no help came. The people cried aloud,-Let the gods help their own priest. Is there no god of the air to send a whirlwind to the help of the priest? Is there no god of the water to send a river against his adversary? Is there no god of the earth to open a pit for the enemy of all gods? The gods of the air are not; the gods of the water and the earth are not. There is no god but God Almighty.

"Ezel and Iraph fell dead together at the foot of the altar. The people returned their bodies food for me upon the trees and bushes, and the to the dust, according to the word of the Lord that He spake unto Adam. They buried the body of Bethzanak with the bodies of Ezel and Iraph, and builded three tombs of stone upon great altar to Jehovah upon the bank of the river of Adam."

The moral of this long story needs no interpreter. Its points are all sharp enough to penetrate for themselves; and its numerous hits strike home to the ever-prevailing facts that lie at the root of human nature. All truth CHELYS. seems to be ancient. [Correspondence of the Maryland Journal.]

Just previous to the first of July Mr. Tanner decided that Pension agents might make needed increases in their clerical force in excess of the money appropriated for that purpose and that he would ask Congress for an appropriation covering the deficiency. As soon as the Secretary's attention was called to this of the morning! Lo, the birds sing with sweet | he notified the Pension agents that their clerivoices in the branches, and the goats come to cal forces must be reduced to correspond to the appropriation By Congress and, that he did not. nsider it lawful to make a deficiency by employing additional clerks. The next move by the Scoretary that seems to reflect upon both the Commissioner of Pensions and the Commission now engaged in investigating the rerating of pensions was to order all the evidence in the re-rating of Senator Mandersons pension brought to his office when he could make a personal examination of it. It seems very certain that unless the official relations of these two men are soon changed that one or the other

M Hurley, the Indiana republican who recently declared the position of Third Auditor of the Treasury. At the time it was stated that he declared he had been tendered a more lucrative position by a railroad, but according to the story now told he declined, because he was requested to by President Harrison, and the reason he was asked was the discovery that the Government was now suing him for money claimed to be due from him when he was removed by Mr. Cleveland from the postmastership at New Albany, Indiana. Most administrations have been more or less influenced by a group of men known as a "Kitchen Cabinet," but the nursery has been substituted by the present one for the kitchen and Baby McKee is Lord High Chancellor.

THE CHIEF JUDGESHIP. Hagerstown Mail, August 17th. The appointment by Governor Jackson Judge David Fowler as Chief Judge of the Third Judicial Circuit, composed of Baltimore and Harford counties, has met with general approval. He has been Associate Judge in the same Circuit since 1882 and has distinguished himself as an able, just and upright Judge, and strictly attentive to the duties of his The Chief Judges of the different Circuits compose the Court of Appeals of Maryland and pointment one of the Judges of that Court. He has a peculiar fitness for the high office to which he has been elevated. He is a man of spotless integrity, conscientious, industrious and painstaking. He has a sound judgment, even temper and a good disposition, which, together with seven years experience upon the Bench will make him a valuable and useful member of the Court of Appeals. The appointment of the Governor only lasts until the general election in November. Judge Fowler has been nominated for the position by the Democrats, and there is, or at least there ought to be no doubt about his election. The whole State is interested in its judiciary and its Appellate Court. None should reach that high station except such as are qualified, with characters beyond reproach, and whose public acts and private life are a sufficient guarantee that the dignity and character of the bench will be maintained. That Judge Fowler is a suitable man for the position, is beyond question. He will administer justice and right freely without sale and fully without any denial. Give us a pure and independent ju-

Judge Fowler is a native of Washington county and is generally and favorably known by our people. He is a son of the late Hon, Robert Fowler, formerly one of our most popular and enterprising citizens, and who through his influence did much to advance the material interests of this county. The Governor has appointed Mr. N. Charles rke to the position of Associate Judge made "We now see with our eyes, and know in our vacant by the promotion of Judge Fowler.
