Mrs. U. S. Grant should by all means refrom Riverside Park, where they now lie, enclosed in a hideous oven-shaped mansoleum, a disgrace to the great city of New York. The promises which some of the New York people made to the distressed widow and her family on Mt. McGregor, when the General's body laid there, in order to induce her to place the body where it is, have all been violated and the best thing to do would be to remove the body to the Soldiers' Home, Washington, where it properly belongs. The General's burial was made a grand speculation by New York. If Grant were alive any amount of money could be collected in order to use him; but now that he is dead, there is no further use for him, and the money collected for the monument should be given to some charity and thus gotten out of sight. It seems a disgrace where it now is.

A FINE PEABODY STATUE.-With the consent of Mr. Robert Garrett it is proposed to dedicate the fine bronze statue of George Peabody during the approaching September celebration. A couple of years since Mr. Garrett gave an order to Mr. W. W. Story, the celebrated New England sculptor, to make a statue of George Peabody, which was subsequently cast in bronze at Rome, where Mr. Story has his studio. This statue Mr. Garrett proposed should be presented to the city to be placed in the square opposite the Peabody Institute. Mr.

Garrett will be asked to give his consent. King Humbert, of Italy, has created our electrical wizard, Thomas A. Edison, a Count. "I slept; it may have been ages, for all I know, but I was suddenly awakened by a jar through the frame of the monstrous creature in whose vitals I reposed, like Jonah in the trip that he took inside of a whale, though of course, this creature's business was conducted on a much more extensive scale. Springing up, I rushed to my window and found that it was blocked up by a high, perpendicular wall, alongide of which we were lying, and the strange creature was scraping its sides against this, and greaning, and creaking as though in great pain; and there were men at the lower part of its side trying to push the wall away with long poles. I went out on the balconies, then, and from side to side of our prison's huge bulk, only to find that we were shut in on all sides by similar walls, though how we could ever get into such a box in mid-ocean was a mystery to me. I was half deafened, too, by the sound of a great rush of waters, which I at first took to be a furious tempest of rain, though I found that there was no rain descending, but that the noise came up out of the sea beneath us. "I could not imagine what it all meant. But Henry Shaw, a venerable philanthropist, died Club will have no meet at Pimlico the coming at St. Louis, on his beautiful property familifall is no reason why Pimlico may be considarly known as "Shaw's Garden," but named by ered dead. Gen. Frank Brown announces the him "Tower Grove Park," on the 25th inst., following entries for the races during the Exaged 89 years. Mr. Shaw was an Englishman position week, commencing September 9th. by birth, and remained a batchelor, though a warm admirer of the female sex. By assiduous As will be seen there are several Baltimore county horses in the lists, and it is likely Pimattention to his hardware business he amassed lico will be crammed with people to witness a large fortune, estimated (at his death) at $2,-500,000. He retired from business at the age of PURSE $1,000-2.27 CLASS. 40. He was a great lover of botany, and to George A. Singerly, Philadelphia, b. m. Cathegive vent to his desires purchased 800 acres of land adjoining and then partly in the limits of the city of St. Louis, in which he planted every tree, shrub and flower that would grow in that climate. We remember well in a visit to St.

Louis in 1872 we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Shaw at his residence in his then celebrated "Gardens." He was always engaged either in giving vent to his love among his trees, shrubbery, fruits and flowers, or in study, and was averse to being interviewed. However, when being pressed to give audience to a company of Marylanders, among whom were several ladies, he promptly consented, and conducted us through his gardens, explaining everything, which gave him great delight .-

These "Gardens" are now the property of the city, and are the constant resort of the population. Mr. Shaw prescribed a code of rules for its government, which are rigidly adhered to. The only relative of Mr. Shaw in this country s a sister, Mrs. Julius Morriss, of St. Louis. BALTIMORE'S "FOUR HUNDRED." Baltimore has imitated Boston and New York and announced her "Four Hundred," in the shape of her "Guard of Honor," sons of the "Great great,-and-Great,-and-Grandfathers, who "fit into the Revolution" in 1812 or therea. bouts. These "Four Hundred" are to be the guard for the "sacred relics" which are to appear in the several processions, &c., during Ex position week. Mr. Eben Appleton having declined to allow our sacred old "Star Spangled Banner" to appear in line, that portion of the "Four" will have to wear sackeloth and throw ashes on their heads. Gen. Frank P. Stevens used all the delicate arts of which a Maryland polite gentleman is capable, but the obdurate heart of the cold old Knickerbockerian who holds the aforesaid sacred old gridiron, would not melt. We trust that that portion of the "Four" who would have had the relic in charge

Oyster tongers are now at work, and all the necessary machinery of the byster-packing industry is being brightened up and put in good order to vigorously prosecute the business as soon as Jack Frost shall announce his arrival and assert his sway--as Jack is a necessary companion to a good oyster. We calculate the oysters will be fat and luscious the coming season, if, as is asserted to be true, oysters get fat after every rain, which carries from the highlands into the rivers and creeks where are oyster grounds, the silt and fine earth which is alleged to be the fattening force of the oyster.

member and keep fresh, but the memory seems often unable or unwilling to retain even plain and common facts. Prof. A. S. Boyd, of Baltimore, has written an excellent volume, entitled "Modern Mnemotechny," by the study of which one can at all times refresh that subtle gift-the brain. This little volume explains Prof. Boyd's methods and thoroughly teaches the art. A good memory is an almost indispensable companion to an editor, and is a good assistant in the daily and multifarious duties in which he is engaged. IMPORTANT CATHOLIC EVENT. Cardinal Gibbons states that the answers to the invitations to the centennial of the Catholic Hierarchy to be held in Baltimore Novemper 10th and succeeding days indicate a very large attendance. Fully fifty of the Bishops of the United States will be present. Cardinal Taschereau, Archbishop of Quobec, has sent a very cordial acceptance and a large number of Canadian Archbishops and Bishops will doubtless do the like. The strike has spread and involves nearly every labor element in that big city. The English authorities are becoming alarmed at the condition of affairs, and keep the military in readiness to suppress any outbreak. A London mob is nearly equal to a Paris Commune, and when once organized and set in motion involves everything which comes in its way. It grows upon what it feeds. HALF RATES TO BALTIMORE. For the benefit of visitors to the Baltimore Exposition week after next, the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore, Baltimore and Potomac, and Alexandria and Fredericksburg Railroad Companies will sell excursion tickets to Baltimore, from September 7th to 14th, valid for return until September 21st, from all sta-

When, oh, when will the cable help us on our way ?"—Baltimore American, 20th.

Or if they did not believe in these wonders and marvels, why all the eld nations of the world agreed in inventing such low pen, enclosed on all sides, and I thought it fictions, would be a problem quite as difficult We laugh at these fabulous tales, it is true, and deride them as the rankest sort of baseless superstitions. But all the while we are doing so we think nothing of accepting still greater marvels than these as the most commonplace, moment that we were descending lower and

I have been out on the balcony of my apartments, and I saw a whole flock of great birds, larger than our Roc, with their white or grey wings folded, and tied down, it would seem, by the people who walked over them, and quietly proceeded to rob them of the millions of eggs which they contained. The people called these eggs "water-millions," and queen things they were, as big as a bushel, and as green as grass. And they seemed to be alive; for they flew from the backs of the birds to wagons stationed along the beach; and though

I supposed they were lizards or crocodiles. But I found that they had long arms, and in their hands they held long sharpened poles with which they were trying to spear up some of those green eggs that were swimming about in the water, thus proving themselves to be amphibious. And finally the creatures succeeded in capturing some of them; and when they had cracked the shells open; I saw that the yelks of the eggs were of beautiful red color. This is indeed a strange

And, moreover, we soon met several others of its vast species, sailing over the great sea. I had never before even dreamed of such marvels as these.
