Garfield's Physician .- Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, o Philadelphia, who was one of President Garfield's consulting physicians after the shooting, is now 71 years old. By reason of his age and undoubted bility he stands at the head of the Philadelphia medical fraternity. He has never sought honors they have invariably come to him. Dr. Agnew is the frankest of men-he really carries his heart on his sleeve. His charges are frequently remarkably small. On one occasion a patient called to pay his bill with a roll of greenbacks amounting to $1,000, expecting to hand the doctor the whole of it. Imagine his surprise when he was told that $25 would ettle the account. If a patient is in temporary financial straits or really poor, Dr. Agnew would much rather not be paid at all.—The Epoch. That Fireman.—It is a dark and stormy night. The wind is blowing a gale from the northwest.— And as hundreds of families are sitting around their hearthstones, once more rehearsing the oftenold stories of boy and girlhood days, some one calls the attention of another to the terrible night without, and what a terrific thing a fire would be in such a strong wind. The words are scarcely uttered when the clang! clang!! clang!!! of the fire bell is heard as it is waited along by the strong wind. Every one is on his feet in an instant, and not a moment is lost in getting out of the house. and, if possible, to the scene of the conflagration But here let us leave this part of the population and step into the engine house. See the noble horse run out of his stall as the bell strikes; watch him and see how impatient he is to be gone. But look at the fireman as he comes sliding down on the pole and jumps in his seat and is hurried away to the fire. Now, dear, gentle reader, why is it that on arriving at the scene of the conflagration he dismounts from his seat and grabs up a pick-axe, rushes frantically to a poor, innocent stone step, and, with might and main, strives to dislodge it, while valuable property is burning up all around him? Again, gentle reader, why is it that another of these brave men will rush in a house and up to a handsomely furnished room and grab up a $50-dollar mirror, then rush to the front window, and, with great force, throw it down to everlasting destruction, and then run back to the same room and pick up a feather bed and gently carry it down the stairs and deposit it safely nearly a square away amid cheers from his comrades? Look again, gentle reader, see him rush into the house once more. This time he grabs up a pair of old tongs, and in the excitement he ruins nearly $10 worth of fursitime, and with mighty yells that would have put a band of Indians on the warpath to shame, he deposits them along with the feather bed nearly a square away. Why is it that he is never known to leave one panel of fence standing within a square of the Children at the Church Service."

PHONOGRAPHY. The Uses to Which Phonography is Put-Speed Attained by Experts-HowitShould be Taught-Salaries Paid Expert Phonegraphers-The Corresponding Style and the Reporting Style.

BALTIMORE COUNTY, MD., Sept. 28d, 18.9.

There is no doubt but what this is one of the most valuable arts of the 19th century. As one sits down and watches an expert phonographer as he is in the act of taking a verbatim report of a speech at the rate of 175 or 250 words per minute, and sees his pencil flying over the paper with lightning-like rapidty, making those mysterious marks which really are outlines of words, he wonders how it is possible for any one not possessed with supernatural power to be able to discipher those scrawly marks such as would be made by a fly dipped in ink and then let loose on a clean sheet of paper. But, nevertheless, it is almost as easy for the expert phonographer to read his notes taken at a speed of 125 or 250 words per minute as it is for a person of ordinary intelligence to read common print. This may seem incredible, but it is nevertheless true, as any phono grapher will tell you. Editors, authors, etc., employ phonographic amanuenses with great advantage. Editors dictate their editorials and authors compose whole books with a great saving of time and labor by employing an expert phonographer. Nearly all business men, such as publishers, railroad presidents, bankers, insurance companies and merchants of all kinds employ good phonographers, either as private secretaries or corresponding clerks, and lawyers also find their services almost indispensable. The demand for first-class phonographers is ahead of the supply, and, in my opinion, it always will be. supply, and, in my opinion, it always will be.

Phonography records language with six times the speed of long-hand writing. It is possible for you to come very close to how fast a phonographer you can become by writing speeches, business letters, or anything else for a certain length of time in a neat and legible long-hand at your highest rate of speed and then multiply by six the average rate per min-ute. Phonography is one of the most difficult arts to teach with complete success. As it is usually taught in business colleges and so-called colleges of chools of short hand, a very few persons reach any practical efficiency. The most important features of success in teaching short hand may well be summed up as follows: I. The teacher must be a practical phonographer, apable of doing all kinds of rapid reporting and understand his business. 11. The teaching of the very best system (Ben III. Each and every pupil must be taught separately and privately, and not in classes. IV. The teacher must be thoroughly familiar with the principles and should be very fond of the V. The teacher must require the same accuracy in advanced writing and transcript of notes as is done in reporter's offices. This combination gives the pupil confidence, enables him to master the art, and makes him feel that he is under the influence of a successful method. Phonographers in commercial houses receive salaries ranging from $15 to $50 per week. In the Courts official phonographers are employed at good salaries and in nearly all cittes there are professional reporters having offices of their own, doing a general business, reporting trials, conventions, arguments, lectures, sermons, speeches, debates, etc., etc. lo expert professional reporter ought to earn less than $3,500 per annum—many phonographers earn much more than this. As a rule Court phonographers are the best paid. Many of them make from $2,000 to $6,000 a year, and there is one case on record where the Judge of a Western Court received a salary of $5,000 a year, while the phonographer of the same Court received a salary of $8,000. The Judge, it is said, wanted to change places with him. The student in learning the Benn Pitman system is first learned what is called the corre ponding style of short hand. In writing this style of phonoact sound of the word for which it was intended.— As laborious and slow as this may appear, it is quite a pair of step-ladders, and whenever he wanted possible for a fast writer to write nearly four times as fast as he could in long-hand, which for many purposes is a sufficiency. After the student has mastered this part of short-hand thoroughly he is advanced to the more difficult and beautiful part of porting style, by the use of which it is possible for a rapid writer to attain the speed of 260 words per minute, which is at the rate of about 41/4 words per second. A speed of 125 to 150 words per minute, however, is a sufficiency for many purposes. I have taken a verbatim report of a law lecture at a speed of about 125 words per minute, and transcribed my notes with very little difficulty. The reason that the reporting style of short-hand can be written with such rapidity is because all gagements were flatteringly large in receipts, and | vowels are omitted and the outlines are contracted to a great extent. It is possible for a phonographer to write from 8 to 11 words together without once lifting his pen from the paper. Now this kind o writing, which is called phrasing, is not admissable in fast writing, where legibility is required as well oct. 7th—"Sweet Lavender," a delightful comedy words as—in the, of the, for the, as far as, as long as, etc., can be phrased advantageously. The dedicatory sermon will be preached on Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock by the Presiding Eider, when the church will be officially transferred to the Conference. There will be services in the after noon and night, which will be continued nightly for perhaps several weeks in charge of the preachers of Hereford Circuit. Should Sunday turn out to be a bright and clear day, very large congregations may be expected to be present. More than a year ago the trustees of Wesley Chapel found that the old church was feet decaying and concluded to the old church was fast decaying and concluded to build a new one. Mr. Jacob M. Pearce at once donated a very eligible site of about two acres of level land and has since added another acre. The Building Committee, Mr. John Bosley, Chairman, Messrs. Wm. Norris and Jacob M. Pearce, associates, laid off the ground and commenced the erection of as fine a church as there is on Hereford Circuit, or perhaps in the upper end of the county. The building is of brick with heavy stone foundations, and ornamented slate roof with marble trimmings running around the entire building. The church measures 35 by 46 feet, and vestibule and belfry measure 8 by 11 feet, and is 73 feet from the ground. A solid, li feet, and is 73 feet from the ground. A solid, clear-sounding bell of about 800 pounds weight, coming from the well-known foundry of Messrs. Joshua Regester & Sons, has been placed in the steeple. The entrance to the church is by heavy marble steps, and passes through heavy double doors. The interior is very elaborate and handsome. The walls are partly wainscoted and the ceiling fully in imitation of maple and oak. The floor is covered with a tation of maple and oak. The floor is covered with a heavy green carpet, underlaid with cotton to smother the sound and give more durability to the carpet. The seats or benches, the desk, altar rails, &c., are of solid black walnut, of the best of work-manship and finely varnished. Two fine chandeiers are suspended from the ceiling which will supply plenty of light. The pretty stained windows from the house of Messrs. Murphy & Co., of Baltimore, throw a beautiful, mellow tint over the whole interior. The cost of the building will be nearly $5,000, which sum is largely provided for. This, however, does not include the hauling and other work done by the people of the neighborhood for which no charge will be made. Much credit is due to Mr. John Bosley, who, by the silent consent of Messrs. Norris and Pearce, had nearly the entire management of the ballding resting upon him. The lates, likewise, deserve much praise, as they were intrumental is raising a great deal of money and doing a good deal of hard work in making the state of th ing the interior of the church so bright and beautiful. Mr. Geo. W. Wilhelm done the stone and brick work, as also the plastering. ORDER OF PUBLICATION. WILLIAM CHECKLEY SHAW THOMASINA H. GIST.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR BALTIMORE COUNTY, IN EQUITY. The object of this suit is to procure a decree o this Court to take jurisdiction in the case, and decree that the land mentioned in the Bill was sold in accordance with law by Samuel I. Donaldson nd William George Krebs, the Trustees named in the Bill, under the decree in the cause therein men-tioned of Krebs vs. Gist in the High Court of Chancery. That the sale of the same was duly reported to and finally ratified by the said High Court of Chancery, and that the deed from said Trustees to Peregrine Shipley was executed in pursuance of said decree and final order of ratification. The Bill states that William Checkley Shaw is the present owner of the land mentioned in said Bill; that it passed regularly by successive deeds, of rec-from said Trustees named in said Bill to said Shaw, and by the will of Samuel H. Bleakley, and recor-ded in the Offic of the Register of Wills in Balti-more County, and by sale by his Executors under That said deed from said Trustees to said Shipley recites the sale of land of which this is a part in pursuance of a decree in the cause of Krebs vs. Gist in the High Court of Chancery, subsequently removed to the Superior Court of Baltimore City and the final ratification of said sale; that a copy f the docket entries of said cause flied as an exhibit in said cause, show a decree for the sale of land and several reports of sales and final ratification of the same. The Bill also recites that the papapers in said cause were never recorded, and were taken from the Superior Court of Baltimore City by Samuel I. Donaldson, and are presumably lost; that Thomasina H. Gist is the only child and heirat-law of Thomas H. Gist, who died seized of said land, and that she is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and that she has virtually admitted that on account of the loss of the said chancery papers It is thereupon, on this 31st day of August, A. D ject and substance of this bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person, or by solicitor, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.
