AMUSEMENTS.

Ford's Crand Opera House-- Week of March 17th, Wilson Barrett, the Great English Tragedian .- During the week of March 17th, Mr. Wilson Barrett, the famous English tragedian, and his distinguished company, will appear at Ford's Grand Opera House. This engagement is worthy of more than ordinary interest in dramatic circles, as Mr. Barrett is an actor, whose artistic worth appears in all he undertakes. This is his second and most successful tour in this country. In Philadelphia Mr. Barrett has just concluded a three weeks engagement of the greatest brilliance. The repertoire for the Baltimore engagement will be as follows : Monday and Tuesday—"Claudian." Wednesday and Thursday—"Ben My Chree." Wednesday Matinee—"A Color Sergeant," "Clerical Error" and "Chatterton.' Friday Night-"Hamlet." Saturday Matinee and Night-"Silver King."

Brunin, Abachi and Mozuz, Dutch Daly, and Mons. De Blanche. A True Christian Woman .-- The late Mrs

Caroline Donovan, whose death occurred last week, was a truly charitable Christian woman. It will be recollected that some months since she gave to the Johns Hopkins University $100,000. Previously she had given $10,000 to the Washington and Lee University. Since her will has been made public it is found she has made another charitable bequest. Some time before her death she ordered $12,000 of the purpose of educating candidates to the ministry of the Catholic Church. The interest of this sum, which will amount annually to about $650 is to be paid to Cardinal Gibbons and his successors. As Mrs. Donivan was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, her gift is evidence that she was a lady of true Christian principles and without sectarianism in her noble gift.

Monkton Items.-Our weekly budget of news from this section of Baltimore county is exceeding-ly meagre and uninteresting. There in nothing going on at this time that is much worthy of note, not even courting is indulged in as it ought to be by the eligible ones. We have noticed one or two udividuals making strenuous or rather spasmodic efforts to gain the notice and affections of some of our fair ones but from what we can learn, succes n that direction is exceedingly doubtful. Marriage among our folks seems like something not to be thought of at present, and is treated more like an impossibility. Our well-known readers at all times to attend weddings upon invitation is wholly ignored and our good advice to others, to go and get married, which is always freely and greatuitou given, is almost treated with scorn and contempt. We will have to wait for better times and a rise Miss Sallie, the six-year-old daughter of the late Mr Harry Nelson, residing in the upper end of the 10th District, near the Harford county line, can

Miss Warner, of St. James, is visiting friends in Baltimore and Miss Holmes, of "Bellefield," is the guest of Mrs. Stevenson A. Williams, in Bel Air. The residence of Mrs. Mary E. A nice time was spent and good cheer partaken of. The little company could not indulge, however, in noisy demonstration on account of the very severe filness of ran swiftly along and got into the woods belonging to Mr. John W. Mr. Samuel H. Tagart, President of the York Road Railroad Company, visited Col. L. B. McCabe, member of the House of Delegates, last week. It is hoped that the business transacted was in regard to rapid transit and cheaper fares. A load of hay drawn by three mules, owned by Edw. Kieffer, and driven by a colored teamster named Jenifer, tried to pull down the beam cover Baltimore City securities set apart in perpetuity for of the scales belonging to John L. Rosensteel. Let me assure you that the ways and designs of this world are hard to find out and comdesigns of this world are hard to find out and comprehend. You will therefore need the utmost caution and circumspection to avoid its snares and tricks. To accomplish this I know of no surer plan than to avoid as much as possible promiscuous and frivolous company, and seek associations with the discreet and honorable, and to look well into the actions, as well as the motives, of all with whom you may come in social contact. Be sure, my dear wife, constantly and habitually to practice charity among the poor and afflicted, and above all remember that the securing of the good things of this world is right and proper to a certain extent but are as nothing in comparison with the salva-tion of the soul, that precious jewel which alone can admit its possessor into communion with the saints above.'' Hunter, attorney, brought a curious case into Court on the 11th inst. It was an attachment on money put into the hands of a stake holder. The case was brought up under a suit of John K. Downs and Thomas R. Downs, administrators of Eli Henkle Jones, vs. Nicholas Morris, garnishee of William E. Miller, and others. It appeared from the testimony that Miller had made a bet of fifty dollars with William Ensor, both being voters in the 7th district. The terms of the wager were re-duced to writing as follows; "Articles of agreement made and concluded this 29th day of August, 1889 between Wm. E. Miller of the first part and William Ensor of the second part. The said Miller of the first part doth agree to bet William Ensor, of the other part, that G. Albert Mayes will carry the seventh district of Baltimore county. Maryland, at a primary election to be held on the 14th day of A house on Glenwood Avenue, the property of Mr. Patrick Gallagher, was found to be on fire last Friday evening. The fire is supposed to be of incendiary origin. This shows the necessity of having a fire engine in the town.

September, 1889, the money to be delivered to the winning party immediately after said election. Signed William E. Miller, William Ensor."

Eli Henkle Downs had obtained a judgment against Miller in 1881 for $801,50, which is still outstanding. The administrators of Downs's estate hearing that Miller had made the betand deposited the money, attached it in the hands of the stake-holder, Nicholas Morris. The case was tried before Judge Burke, who decided it in favor of the plain-When the attachment was served on the stakeholder as to Miller's money Ensor withdrew his deposit. M. on the Northern Central Railroad, between Timonium and Lutherville. She had been to Texas and was on her way home, having come down on the Cockeysville Ac-commodation which arrives at Timonium at 6.45, She resided on the York Turnpike adjoining the residence of Mr. Samuel Collings. When getting off the train she started to walk down the track, and when at the siding at the old pic-nic grounds the Express from the West came thundering along She was on the west side of the tracks and it is thought the cylinder of the locomotive struck her. She was found some time after by her grandson in the small gutter alongside the track. Upon examination by Dr. Bussey, who had been summoned, it was found that her neck and her left arm were broken. Messrs. C. Harris and Wm. Collings learning of the accident arose from their beds and went to the spot where the body was found and conveyed it to her home. On Tuesday 11th Deputy Sheriff Wm. M. Risteau summoned a jury of inquest, and Justice A. W. Ensor held the inquest. The jury rendered a verdict exonerating the railroad company from all blame in Mrs. Murrav's death. The Fair and Festival at Eklo.-The fair and city Knights and ladies also took a lively interest in the same manner, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. McCuer being prominent among the latter. "Hands Across the Sea."—Very Dine Seedrry.—One of the prettiest effects ever witnessed ipon the stage is the "fog scene," which opens the ourth act of Jefferson & "sylor's new melodrams, "Hands Across the Sea." whose production at Ford's Grand Opera House, in Baltimore, during the week of March 8d proved so successful.

When the curtain rises nothing is visible to the audience except what appears to be a thick fog, similar to the kind that is so annoying to the so-journer in the British Capital during the prevaence of its noted "London fogs." The visitor to the theatre can see that the stage is enveloped in a dance mist through which nothing can be disa dense mist through which nothing can be dis-cerned by the eye. There is, however, plenty to be heard, and from the gloom ever and anon one hears heard, and from the gloom ever and anon one hears the ominous ringing of the bell, the shrill scream of the fog whistle, and the hoarsely-voiced orders of the Captain as he directs the action of the seamen. Gradually and slowly the mist clears away, and, little by little, the different parts of the vessel are brought to sight, until, with the entire disappearance of the fog, there bursts upon the vision of anxious and expectant audience a full view of the magnificent quarter deep of the steamship the magnificent quarte: deck of the steamship "Australssian" in mid-ocean, with the Captain on the watch and the various officers and sailors at their respective stations or hurrying to and fro in obedience to commands. A spontaneous burst of genuine and hearty applause, of course, follows this excellent hearty applause, of course, lollows this excellent piece of stage work.

Few, if any, of the audience have any idea as to how this realistic effect is produced or the labor which is necessary to perfect it. Stretched across the entire back of the stage, extending from one "tormentor" wing to the other, is a long from pipe, about three inches in width and perforated with a large number of small holes. There is, of course, a steam gauge at each end. Just before the curtain rises there is injected into this nine about 65 pounds.

denced into water, thus clearing away the fog and giving the desired effect.
