Winaus, appeared before the County Commissioners on the 6th inst. and presented a bill of $95 for the loss of a horse which fell over the Hammond's Ferry Bridge. From the statement she made it appeared that the horse was allowed to run at large, and being blind in one eye had walked off the side of the bridge and was killed. In this view of the case the County Commissioners lecided that they could do nothing for her, as it is clearly against the law for any person to allow horses or cattle to run at large and unattended in Bultimore county within 5 miles of the limits of Toll From Funeral Trains on the York Road.—The Baltimore and Yorktown Turnplke Road Company will hereafter require funeral proessions passing over the road to pay toil. Presi lent Nelson Perin, of the Company, said that it nad never before required those accompanying funerals in carriages to pay toll, but that as other turnpike companies made no exception in their favor, he did not see why his Company should do vo. The carriages composing a funeral train would cause as much wear as any other carriages, and he thought they should be required to pay the same Hearses, as heretofore, will be exempt from Serious Accident .- On Tuesday, 5th inst. Mr. John Brogan, employed as a Superintendent o what is known as the skiff gang with the Ideal lime and Stone Company, at Texas, in the 8th District, met with a serious accident, which may result in death. The skiff was being pushed along the track loaded with stone, and Mr. Brogan was standing under it, when a stone, weighing probably eight pounds, fell from the skiff and struck him on he head, crushing his skull in a dreadful manner he fall of the stone was 30 feet. Prof. L. McLean iffany was sent for and rendered all the surgical aid possible by taking some of the broken bones out, but grave fears are entertained that the accident may prove fatal.

Attempted to End Her Life.—On Saturday ast, 2d inst., Mary Walters, a resident of Canton, was arrested on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and was delayed in the Police Station at Canton by Justice J. P. Dorsey until she should recover her senses. She started and walked into one of the cells saying that they need not think she was afraid to be locked up. After being put in the cell he tied her apron around her neck and probably would have ended her life had not the officers, who thought she meant mischief, kept a sharp lookout and prevented her from carrying out her plan. She was then taken from the cell, for fear she would make another attempt on her life, and while de-tained in the custody of the officers at the Station gave them no end of trouble. Chasing Relies in Hospard.—The recent re-River, below this place, which were included in the property carried away by the memorable freshet here of 1868, has had the effect of increasing the energy of relic hunters, and the river banks have almost daily been patroled by parties in quest of some memento of the occasion. Among the various relics lately found was a bronze statuette, representing the "Dying Gladiator." It was discovered resenting the "Dyi covery of numerous articles along the Patapaco ray's, and taken to her home, where on Tuesday t was recognized as having been the property of Dr. Thomas B. Owings, of this city. It was one of the parlor ornaments, and was on the mantel when the Doctor's dwelling was swept away. Howard County Progress, Aug. 2d.

Towson's Chemical Engine .- On Wednesday 6th inst., the County Commissioners appointed William Nelson, of the 11th District, as Captain of the new Chemical Engine to be placed at Towson Station, and Lee Bosley, of Towson, as Assistant, to have charge of the horses. Mr. Nelson has heretoore been a member of the Fire Department. On Wednesday, Superintendent McAlesse placed the battery in the Towson Station. The Walters' Habeas Corpus Cass .- On Monday, 4th inst., Thomas Waters, who was lodged in jail at Towson under a commitment issued by Jusof Highlandtown, charged with shooting John J. Myers, at Highlandtown. was brought before Judge N. C. Burke on a writ of kabeas corpus issued at the instance of his counsel, Feers. John Grason and W. R. Townsend, asking for his discharge from custody.

Mr. F. I. Duncan, State's Attorney, represented the were J. Henry Weinhold, Constable, who swore out the warrant before Justice Cook upon the information he received from John Icke, who said that he saw Waters shoot the colored man. The coroner also told him to arrest Waters.

John icke testified that he was not at Waters' place on Sunday night; that he was arrested on Monday and put in the watch-house, and did not know who irrested him nor what he was arrested for: in fact he did not know anything. He was too drunk to know anything and did not know anything at all Justice Cook, who committed Waters and Icke. testified that Icke said in the office "that his heart was full and he must tell it; that he saw Tommy Waters kill Wesley and it was a shame to shoot a good man like that." This statement was made in Justice Hevern's office. Alex. Hughes, the Constable and Special Officer at Highlandtown, testified that when he saw Icke he was very drunk, and he thought disorderly.

John Hellman, who is sometimes called "Jesse James," and sometimes "Schmitte," went into Waters' tavern to get a drink of beer just after Waters was arrested; she was crying, and said it was Wesley's fault; that Wesley went to pick up a spittoon to hit Waters and that Waters shot him. He also heard the man loke my "My heart is too full, Waters shot that man." Mrs. Waters then knocked icke off the porch with something she had in her hand. Mrs. Waters kept open after the shooting, anyhow, until I got there, which was on Monday about 1 or 2 o'clock. Wm. T. Weatherstine testified that he went into Waters' with Hellman to get a glass of beer, and Mrs. Waters was going on talking; said she could not keep it any longer; said Wesley went to hit Waters with a spittoon and that he shot him; Chas. Getty was in the bar with them at that time; was ust about 2 o'clock, and just at the time when aters was arrested. Mrs. Myers, colored, widow of the man who was shot, testified that she lives on Josephine Street, in Baltimore; that she went down to Waters' place on Monday when she heard that her husband was shot; when she got down to the place Mrs. Waters said, "come in," and Mr. Waters also said "come in," and he said, "do you think I killed your hus-band?" and she replied, "I don't think but I know says the iceman to his customer. There is not as much trouble in determining upon the size of the parcel as there is to find the size of the ducat to be but did not think he was drunk. considered by the iceman a recompense for it. Cot-Carvill T. Grace testified that he assisted in the ar ton and corn were once considered king, but ice rest of Waters with Constable Weinhold and Mr. has distanced both. There are no flies on ice, and Sapp: heard the man Icke say "that his heart was too full and that Waters shot Wes., and he was too good a darkey to be treated that way, and he saw Vaters shoot him." Mary Adams, colored, went down to Waters' with Mrs. Myers; went into Waters' sitting room; Mr. Waters had a cane in his hand and I saw a pistol in his hip-pocket; then I went out. Mrs. Waters said to Mr. Waters, "if it hadn't been for you. Wes. would be living to-day." He said to Mrs. Myers, 'I'll bury him, anyhow."

Mrs. Davis, a resident of Highlandtown, heard shot about 7 o'clock on Sunday evening.

Mr. Grason, of counsel for the defense. that the testimony was not sufficient to hold the accused in charge and he should ask for his dis-The State's Attorney contended that the accused was properly held, as there was a probable cause for his arrest and detention for an investigation o the case by the Grand Jury. Judge Burke in delivering his opinion, said : Gentlemen:-It would not be proper for me to do I think the interests of justice would be subserved by the discharge of the prisoner. Govanstown vs. Towson.-The Towsons added another to their long string of victories on Wednesday, 6th inst., by defeating the Govanstown Cinb by a score of 26 to 0. How the Towsons slugged the ball! It was very evident from the start the Govanstown boys were "not in it." The game was one-sided, and the only interest centered in it was as to how many runs the home club would score. Stocksdale pitched finely, and his support was fault-ess, saving a dropped fly, which cost nothing. The batting of the Towsons was very hard, and the fieldwork of the visitors was not such as to put a stop to run-getting. OBITUARY. Col. Daniel Jenifer. The hosts of friends of Col. Daniel Jenifer, o The nosts of friends of Col. Daniel Jenier, of Baltimore county, were greatly shocked on Tuesday 5th to learn of his death, which event occurred at the reactions: of his son-in-law, Mr. John H. Mitchell, at Port Tobacco, Charles county. A month or two since Col. Jenifer visited the family of Mr. Mitchell to spend a few months in recreation.— Whilst there he took sick, his disease developing towards Bright's. He had partially recovered, but the extremely hot weather left him very much debilitated, and he was unable to raily. For two or three weeks he gradually sank until death came t him, and he passed away peacefully.

Col. Jenifer was born September 37th, 1815, at Glasvar, Charles county, Md. He was the third son of Hon. Daniel Jenifer, who was a member of Congress and United States Minister to Austria, having been appointed to that position by President Wm. Henry Harrison. Col. Jenifer's mother was Eliza Trippe Campbell, only daughter of John Campbell, who was for three years a member of the House o Representatives of the United States.

Col. Jenifer's grandfather was Dr. Daniel Jenifer, who married Sarah Craik, daughter of Dr. James Craik, the intimate friend and family physician of General Washington. Dr. Daniel Jenifer's father was also named Daniel and was a brother of Daniel, of the Daniel of Thomas, Jenifer The letter held savaral f St. Thomas Jenifer. The latter held severa prominent offices and was a member of the Conven ion which framed the Constitution of the United Col. Jenifer resided in Charles county until abou 1845, when he went with an elder brother to Arkan-sas. He remained there a year or two, and: on his return to his native State was elected 'a member of the House of Delegates. While in Annapolis he be-came acquainted with Miss Mary E. Risteau, daugh-ter of Dr. Thomas C. Risteau, of "Long Island," near och Raven, Baltimore county, to whom he was married in 1848. After his marriage he removed to Baltimore county, where he resided upon his farm, "Good pe," 11th District, until recently, and where he had a large circle of acquaintances and friends. He was a man of great energy, and up to a year ago was actively engaged in farming, and was as full of life as most men of fifty. Col. Jenifer was a rare old Maryland gontleman, in whom there was no guile. He was ever what he seemed, with no sycophasor or hypocrisy, and an honest man in all the relations of life. His friendship was true and lasting, and a promise once given was rigidly observed. He was of a genial, happy temperament : was never controlled by passion, but as gentle and loving as a child.

He always took a deep interest in public affairs, and performed his duties as a citizen with promptness and cherfulness. The last public position he held was as President of the School Board of Baltimore County, in which position he rendered Balti-more county valuable services for over five years. The public school teachers, as well as the patrons of the schools, will recollect him with pleasure as earnestly endeavoring, under all circumstances, to dvance the interests of public education. About a year before his death Judge Morris, of United States District Court, appointed Col. Jenifer as one of three Commissioners to value land at Annapolis desired by the government as an addition to the Naval Academy grounds. This delicate duty he performed to the best interests of the government as well as to the rights and interests of the property owners whose lands were desired by the government. The awards had been completed but a month or two since.

Col. Jenifer's funeral took place at "Long Island," the residence of his son, Mr. Thomas H. Jenifer, near Loch Raven, Maryland Contral Railway. It is the old homestead of the late Dr. Thomas C. Risteau, who resided upon it for many years, and who practiced medicine in that neighborhood fer years back of 1854. The Rev. Wm. Brayshaw, Rector of St. Andrew's P. E. Church, on the Old Harford Road, officiated at the house and at the grave. He paid a just tribute to Col. Jenifer's sterling worth. The body was then borne to the family burying plot, near the dwelling, by William M. Isaac, John Ridgely of H., Washington Sievenson, Col. Robert Feast, Wm. M. Risteau, J. Maurice Watkins, John Spence. Wm. Slade, of Sweet Air, directed the funeral. Five children survive Col. Jenifer. They are-Thomas R. Jenifer, John Jenifer, Miss Florence Jenifer, Mrs. Harrison, wife of Dr. Harrison, resid ing near Loch Raven, Baltimore county, and Mrs. John H. Mitchell, of Port Tobacco. Centennial Grange, P. of H., of Towson, met at ferior in effectiveness. Of the two hits made off their Hall on Thursday 7th and appointed a committee, consisting of Mr. Wm. B. Her fatal illness had been but of a few weeks duration.-About four weeks since she had an attack of cholera morbus, which yielded to the treatment of her physicians, Prof. Samuel C. Chew and br. McDonnell. The past hot weather then coming on left her in a weak and depressed condition from which she was unable to raily. She passed away peacefully as though falling to sleep. For seventy years her faith in God had been strong and it never left her to the last moment, and her mind was clear almost speechless she recognized and fondled with her grandchildren whom she greatly loved, expressing to them, as she had so frequently done as well as to all with whom she came into contact, was, indeed, a happy death, for which she was full prepared, and ready for the summons, as she often expressed it to the writer, "whenever my dear Master may see proper to call for me; I am only waiting; I do not fear death; I shall go to Him and see Him as He is." She was able to and did continually quote many passages of Scripture applicable to her conversation with those around her and she never resitated to embrace every opportunity give good advice and work for her Master's Kingdom. Her chief delight was in the beautiful songs of Zion which she delighted to repeat and very often sing and she had a good clear voice to the day of her The following brief account in the life of this wonderful old lady we take from the columns of our contemporary, the Baltimore American :

Mrs. Sands was remarkable not alone for he ongevity, but for the beauty and simplicity of her life, which endeared her to all who know her, and her good deeds brought happiness to many a heart, She lived in the "times that tried men's souls," and her own heroism and love of country in the stir-ring scenes through which she passed were in keep-ing those of the patriotic stock from which she sprang. She came from a race of soldiers and had she been a man it is safe to say that she, too, would have followed her country's flag in the times when all men who could be were soldiers. Could all that she has seen and been through be collected, it would make a sketch that would read more like fiction than fact. Mrs. Sands' birthplace was Darlington, Harford county, and she was born March 7th, 1789. Her father was Cuthbert Warner, one of the first clock. makers in Maryland, some of whose clocks may still be found in Baltimore. Her mother was Anne mith, whose father was an officer in the War of the Revolution, and served under General Washngton. When she was a child, her parents moved

In 1805 she married Peter Smick, of Annapolis, who was a tinner, and they lived on a farm a few had all sick soldiers taken to her house, and indifrom her just as she was taking it from the oven, "I never told on them," she said, "because knew the poor fellows wanted it worse than I did." Though three score years and ten was the limit or man's life, she had lived five score, and had taken her place with the patriarchs. She was only nine years younger than Joseph and Joshua. She was almost as old as the American Republic. The Constitution was but a few months old when her life began. When George Washington was elected President she had not long seen the light. All the Presidents of the United States and thirty-nine Governors of Maryland had lived in her life. When she was one year old the population of Baltimore was only 18,000, and the population of the whole State 150,000 less than that of Baltimore now.— When she was a girl seventeen years old Baltimore ook that of city. She had heard the echoes of one great war, and lived through three others, and administered to the wants of the sick, and dying in one. The denomination to which she belonged sand to three millions. The modern missionary idea had been born, was grown and brought forth its miraculous fruit. The progress that had been made in her lifetime should make every one exclaim; 'See what the Lord has wrought!' Her right hand had not lost its cunning nor its strength. Her mind was strong and vigorous. She was not laid on the shelf. She took a keen interest in all that was going on around her. All who went to see her were given an intelligent and a courteous reception. She could enjoy a good joke, and had always a quick reply. She had a well-stored memory. Every child might learn a lesson from her life. Almost seventy years ago she professed her life in Christ and was baptized. Since that time she had been an honored and consistent member of the church in which she died. Everybody to assume command of this little barque just starting out on life's voyage? We hope you will be profited loved her, and all who knew her felt that they lost a At the conclusion of the sermon the congregation by our suggestion eang Mrs. Sands' favorite hymn:

I first saw the light of day in a little suburb of Saltimore, Md., known as Hockley Mills. Of course I only have the assurance of my dear old mother, as to the truth of this assertion, but she has often nformed me in her positive way that she was present on that particular occasion, and I have come to the conclusion it must be so. I have always understood that I was a very interesting specimen of babyhood, and up to the age of seven years it was babyhood, and up to the age of seven years it was generally conceded that I took after my father—after that father took after me! I believe the first occasion that he saw fit to display his warmest feeling was when I had inadvertently lost my way en route to school one morning, and during my absent-mindedness strolled into the city of Baltimore, and found myself and my school books perched on a too action. top seat in Old Dan Rice's circus. When I returned home that evening I saw more stars than were announced on all the circus bill boards. Talk about those hard board circus seats; to use a vulgarism, they were "not in it" with dad's southpaw. The they were "not in it" with dad's southpaw. The effect can better be imagined when I assure you I took my breakfast standing the next morning.

It was not many moons before my parents concluded to allow me to take up my residence a little nearer the city, with my big brother-in-law, George F. Wheeler, who then kept the Cold Spring Hotel, a noted hostelry on the York Road. Here I was master of the situation and speedily assumed as master of the situation and speedily assumed an importance as the proprietor's assistant in every department. I endeavored to have more to say and ess to do than any of the other employees, as is usually the case where a relationship admits of otherwise impossible linerties; and it was here I first formed an attachment for the profession I have frequent, and I gracefully approached the entrance to a circus or theatre without that desp-seated feeling of fear for the consequences with which I was seems to be afficied with a sort of dry rot. Consequences with which I was seems to be afficied with a sort of dry rot. ing of fear for the consequences with which I was wont to struggle. One fatal day I saw in the papers an announcement that "George Kunkel's Minstrels" were to appear at the "Old Maryland Institute." I had never seen the minstrels, and I determined to go. I did so and was carried away with enthusiasm. From that moment I knew nothing but min-strelsy. I talked minstrels; I found myself dreaming of minstrels; I would awake with an imaginary ambourine in my hand, and rub my face with my tambourine in my hand, and rub my face with my hands to see if I was blacked up, before I would realize it was, alas! but a dream. I bought a banjo and got a copy of Jayne's almanac to familiarize myself with what is known to the present generation as "chesnuts," with which I would endeavor to amuse the stable boys. I became thoughtful; I had been extravagant; what I had thoughtlessly wasted upon the usual boy's supply of tops, air guns, root beer and peanuts, I hoarded to devote to witnessing the next minstrel performance. I would pick up the paper early every morning and eagerly

How gief we are when the rays of old flot have dropped behind the western hills. We are ready to excisin with flouthey:

"How beautiful is night!
A dowy freshness fills the silent air;
No mist obscures, nor cloud, nor speck, nor stain florests the screne of heaven.

Breaks the screne of heaven.
In full-orbed glory yonder moon divine
Rolls through the dark-blue depths.
How beautiful is night!"

Govansious Jottings.—When we were a little tottler in short dresses we were taught "that to visit the sick and bury the dead" was a corporal work of mercy, but President Perin, of that charitable cor-poration known to the world at large and Govans-town in particular as the "York Road," tells us that any dead man who has no better sense than to have his frame hauled over the bed of the York Road should make his friends pay toll for the opportunity.
