CIRCUMSTANCES CHANGED. THE GIRL WHO LOVED HIM. "To the darkest of nights comes the dawning, Through the thickest of clouds breakes the sun; What happiness thrills me this morning. My wearisome waiting is done! I told them my darling no ill meant:

A promise that's near to fulfillment: Now he's a rich man. "But I care not for rank and position, For the money that makes men or mars I'd toil without rest or remission To pay for his cabs and cigars; And pass through my life without grieving, Though the road might be stony and rough,

For he made when our troubles began

With him to support me, believing That love is enough." THE GIRL WHO THOUGHT HE LOVED HER. Oh! mother! To think I refused him! He loved me so fondly, he said: Till you in your wisdom accused him Of loving your money instead. My hopes for your future are ended;' 'Iwas thus that your homily ran:

My daughter was never intended To love a poor man!' "You preached till I did as you bade me. Great heavens! I must have been mad And so by your scolding you made me Refuse the best chance that I've had. I wish I could see my way clearly; Oh! help me to think of a plan To show that I love him sincerely,
