If half of the words of praise that have been bestowed upon this piece are true, it is one of the greatest of modern dramas put upon the stage in many years. The performances have creai something of a sensation in other cities and the press has teemed with laudatory notices. It is Bronson Howard's best work, it is said and that means that it is a sterling production. George Hawkins Milliams, were recently made by a Commission D. Buchanan Merryman, George W. Yellott and Charles B. McClean, appointed by the Circuit Court or Baltimore County upon petition of Mr. W. S. G. Williams, a brother of George May Williams. The Commission met in May last and organized by appointing Mr. Isaac as Chairman and Mr. Mclean as secretary. Mr. McClean was also selected is Surveyor. After a number of meetings extending through the summer the Commission made heir final report on the 30th day of October, and lled the same in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in a large book especially made for the purpose, with a plat and description of each tract.
The lands in the 3d District, lying between Libands occupied by Mr. John S. Gittings, Jr., containing 195 acres, 1 rood and 7 perches, and lands lying partly in the 1st, partly in 2d, and partly in 3d Elecion Districts, and having an extensive frontage on the Liberty Turnpike Road, containing 579 acres. coods and 8 perches, were divided by assigning onesixth of same, having regard to quantity and quality, to the Safe Deposit and Trust Company of Balimore as Trustee. The Commission assigned one piece of 83 acres lying on the Liberty Turnpike. about half a mile west of the toll-gate and about 32 acres lying at the junction of the Turnpike and Old liberty Road, to the same Trustee, and the remaining five sixths, containing about 660 acres, to the complainant Mr. Wm. S. G. Williams. In addition to the land divided by the Commison, the Commission recommended the sale of 25 cres on the Washington Road; 73 acres on the Hollins Ferry Road, and 92 acres at Mt. Winans. Il in the 13th District: and also 54 acres on the orth Point Road, where said road is crossed by the saltimore and Ohio and the Philadelphia, Wilmingon and Baltimore Railroads, and the "Holly Farm" f 350 acres on Back River, with its ducking and shing shores, believing that it would conduce to he advantage of all parties that these lands should be sold and the proceeds divided in accordance with their respective interests. The total quantity of land involved in the Comssion was 1369 acres. On some of it were valuable improvements, and upon some were valuable White oak timber. The titles for the lands, for the most part, are very old, they having descended from the late John S. Gittings, and have remained in the tamily for man years. He was in command of a small side-wheel steamboat, the Bovernor Moore, with one gun mounted at the bov and surrounded with bales of cotton. At full speed he drove his vessel into a gunboat in the centre of the advancing fleet. He fired several shots at othe vessels and made his escape before any one had realized what he had done. Found Dead in the Woods. - On Sunday morn ing, 23d inst., Mr. Chas. Eder, while rambling in the woods between the Harford Road and Herring Run, came across the remains of a man. He gave the information to Sergt. George Shaefer and mounted Office F. T. Cross, and they went to the place and had the remains moved to the Central Police Station. Coroner Cockerill was notified, but as no information could be obtained to establish the identity f the man, he deemed an inquest unnecessary.-Alongside of the body was found a twenty-two callber revolver, with one barrel empty, leading to the impression that the man had committed suicide. The body had evidently lain in the position in from the body and as dry as a model, there clung a slight fringe of hair, which could only have grown suicide or by the long exposure, is a matter of conjecture. Directly above the little fringe of hair there was an indentation which the discoverer of the bullet had entered the brain but Dr.

The bullet must, therefore, have entered the The remains were clothed in a suit of blue black cloth, through which ran at right angles narrow light blue stripes. The clothes were evidently lose of a man in good circumstances, as they were of good material and but little worn. The shoet were rather small ones, No. 6. They had, too, been but little worn. The hat, which contained the skull, was a rather large one. The head was finely developed. The man was evidently somewha shorter than the average, and was over 30 years o age. The only article upon him was a circular hand looking glass, two and a half inches in diameter. Upon the metalic backing of the glass, in a circle of small circles, the letters "D. D." were cast. Near the body was found a piece of paper, evidently a leaf from a blank book or dairy. Upon it is written a confused jumble, which seemed to say something about the Nile, the Zambesi, the dates from June till September, latitude and longitude, and various numbers of square miles. This paper may have been blown there by the wind. The re mains lay between two small branches, which flow parallel for a short distance, and then into Herring Run. The leaves had fullen and partly covered the body. The remains were identified by Mr. Henry Shuebel of Baltimore as those of his brother, John Shuebel. The identification was made by means of the looking glass and the revolver which were found with the remains. It was on a Tuesday morning, about the middle of April last, that John Shuebel, who was 21 years old, loft the home of his brother Henry, 1821 East Fayette street, to go to work at Keen & Hagerty's. Then he disappeared. John was born in Germany. He came to this country when very young, and was employed by Keen & Hagerty for a tong time. He was very bashful, and never could be persuaded to enter ladies' society. When he grew to manhood he became addicted to drink and late hours Mrs. Caroline, Shuebel and her husband endeavored in every way to reform the young man, but to no avail. The wea pon which caused his death had been purchased the summer before from his nephew for 25 cents. On the Monday before the Tuesday on which John disappeared he seemed more than usually despondent, and would eat no supper. Mrs. Shuebel, the sister-in law of John, was very much attached to Pa., in his issue of the 22d inst. has the following "On the first page of the Enterprise of last week, isome account of the Baltimore Central Railroad, was mentioned that the long bridge over the Susquehanna river, at Port Deposit, Maryland, was destroyed by fire and never rebuilt. We are informed that it was not destroyed by fire, but broken down y a drove of fat cattle. In 1854 the late Amasa vorthington, of Wrightstown, bought a large farm n Harlord county, Maryland, and removed thereto. It was but a short distance from the southern end of this bridge. He lived there but one year, when e returned to Wrightstown. While he lived there, here was a large drove of fat cattle driven from altimore to Philadelphia. On entering the bridge they were divided into sections, but from some cause stampeded, and got into such a mass on the

As to vines, we never let them grow very long in Carroll. They are cut off, so as to have pumpkins instead of vine. In one of the upper istricts a farmer forgot to cut a vine one evening before quitting work, and it grew so much that had a curiosity to see how far it had extended. A Huge Swindle Perpetrated at Highland-town.—About 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon, 21st inst., a buggy made its appearance in Highlandtown containing two men, one of whom, while savagely flourishing a pistol, announced the fact that he would give an exhibition of glass-ball breaking at a place known as "The William Tell House," on the corner of Third street and Eastern avenue, at 6 o'clock that evening. At the appointed time he made his appearance, and had no difficulty in attracting a large crowd. But instead of at once getting at the glass balls he brought forth a curn salve, of which he had five boxes at 25 cents per box, saying that if he did not sell the five within 80 seconds which it was found for many months, as not a ventige of the skin or flesh was left. Around the left had no difficulty in doing so. Having an old hat base of the skull, which was completely disjointed with him he placed the money received for the salve in it, saying that he was now going to give each purchaser of salve a present out of "the old hat," whereupon he returned to each man his upon a white man. The hair was dirty white, but hat," whoreupon he returned to each man his whether the color was caused by the age of the quarter. Next he brought forth some finger-rings which he offered at 50 cents in connection with a box of corn salve, saying that he would also give each purchaser of a ring a present out of the "old After disposing of quite a large number of rings he returned to each purchaser his 50 cents, much to the surprise and delight of his audience. He then offered for sale some watch chains at a do lar apiece, (these also in connection with a box of salve,) in some of which he tied a knot, saying that all who purchased a chain with a knot in it would receive two presents out of the "old hat," and those who had chains without the knot would receive one present. The crowd by this time was very much excited, and purchased freely. When the sale of the chains became slack he took a dollar from the "old hat" and offered it for sale for 75 cents, which was immediately bought. Then he offered the 75 cents for 50 cents, which was as soon disposed of as the dollar; and so on down to a 10 cent piece, which he sold for five cents. Then he put up more chains, giving with each a certificate (which was merely a piece of paper with the figure three written upon t.) saying that all who purchased one of these chains would receive three presents out of the "old hat." The excitement increasing, more chains were disposed of. The sharper now having about $40 in the hat said, 'Gentlemen, if you had the money which I now have in this hat, what would you do with it?" Several in the crowd yelled out that they would keep it. Whereupon he said, "Well, that's just what I am going to do," and suiting action to his words he carefully placed the money in his pockets. Seeing that the crowd was getting rest-less he told them not to go away, for he was going to be as good as his word and give each purchaser of a chain and box of salve one present out of the "old hat," and those that had the knotted chains two presents, and those that held certificates three resents. Whereupon he gave in the above order little square cakes of soap which he claimed would remove from clothing all manner of grease, but which proved to be nothing more or less than ivory soap cut up into small blocks. "Now," said he again, "Don't go away, for now I'm going to give you an exhibition of glass ball breaking." He then called "Bob," his accomplice, to get up into the buggy and toss up the balls. Pointing the pistol in the air a little above the spectators' heads he said, "Are you ready?" "Bob" saying that he was, the sharper said, "Let 'er go!" whereupon "Bob" put whip to the horse, and the sharper lowered the pistol on a level with the crowd, causing them to stoop over in their effort to escape the expected ball and by the time they recovered themselves the horse buggy and the fakirs were quite a distance away, one of the fakirs giving the parting saluta-tion: "Good-bye, gentlemen!" and they were gone, money and all. The heaviest purchasers among the crowd was Mr. Henry Kissner and Mr. Miller. The former, it is said, invested nearly six dollars, while Mr. Miller was not far behind. After the excitement was over Mr. Kissner's friends came over to his place of busicompelled to vacate the premises and go down to No 7 Engine House and stay there until it was time for him to go home and shut up when he be hoped, however, that in the future these two gentlemen will be more cautious and not rush headlong into a speculation, the nature of which they like saying something which would not look very

How's Your Corns ?- A Sharp Deal in Corn Salve in Towson,—On Saturday night 22d inst. two of the genus fakirs drove to Towson in a buggy. They fixed themselves with lights, consisting of rags soaked in oil and tied to sticks and staloned themselves on the York Road near Bosley's Hotel. One of the men opened out and told funny yarns, &c., until he gathered a crowd around him. ie then said, "I did not come here to play monkey or you; I mean business. If there is any person n the crowd who has an aching tooth, I will renove it like the crack of a whip." No one in the crowd having an aching tooth, he further stated that if any person had a birth-mark he could renove it by passing his hand over it. A boy with a nark came up to be operated on, and the fakir made the usual cabalistic signs over the mark and said would disappear. He then asked if there was any one present with a wart. A colored boy stepped up and he said to the boy, "Now, if I hurt you in the least, or draw any b'ood, I will pay you $100." He subbed some salve on where the supposed wart was and asked the boy if it hurt him, or whether there was any blood. The boy said no. The fakir then produced some packages of an infallible corn salve, vhich he sold at 25 cents a package, and said he would give a prize from the hat. Dropping the money in a hat in the buggy he then called the purchasers up and returned them their 25 cents. He then produced some brass finger rings which he said were gold and offered to sell a ring and a pain-killing lotion for 50 cents. After making a few sales, the 24th inst. he called all the parties up and returned them their Mr. Chas. V 50 cents each. He then said he would sell a package of corn salve, a gold chain that cost $4.50, and give a prize from the hat, all for $1. A number o persons handed in the dollars until, it is said, about $30 or $40 had been collected by the fakir. He then said to his partner, "Now, you get in the buggy, want you to throw up the glass balls while I shoot them with a pistol." He produced a revolver which ie flourished and told the crowd to stand back and hold their heads down for fear some of the glass might get in their eyes, and then said, "I promised you a prize from the hat and I am going to be as good as my word." He then took all the money out of the hat and dropped in several small pieces of soap which he distributed to those who had made the dollar purchase, and asked the question of someone "that if they had all that money what would ! they do with it?" and the answer was, "that they would keep it." to which the fakir replied. "that is what I am going to do." He then said "Good-by! and hit the horse a sharp crack and went down the York Pike in the direction of Baltimore as hard as hey could go. There was some talk of following them, but the parties who got "bit" on the dollar purchase mean-lered quietly away, and the small boy and the facelous youth make the souls of the investors sick that community. We wish him success, and hope with the query-"Who bought the corn salve?" Now the common salutation is-"How's your corns ?'' Sale for Unpaid Taxes .- Mr. Caleb S. Hobbs. auctioneer, sold at the Court House on the 25th inst. for Mr. George W.
