NEWS AND NOTES FOR WOMEN.

Sensible people in the country are having tweed, serge, cheviot and poplin gowns made with skirts just a walking length; but as this last spoils by contact with the dust, it is seldom made up of any undue length, nor is it calculated to flow gracefully if overlong. A French gown of this material is of a lovely blue, trimmed with lines of camel's hair, made in the princess style, with a peplum at the princess style, with a peplum at the front and sides bordered with mink, which appears on the sleeves and colar. This class of gown will last for

A Woman Homer. Up to the time of her death, a few lays ago, a poor Russian woman, Irene Fedossova, amused and instructed her countrymen in exactly the same way countrymen in exactly the same way that Homer entertained the Greeks and wandering bards beguiled the Anglo-Saxons. She was simply an ituerant story teller, plodding about from town to city to recite her folklore. Of reading and writingshe knew nothing, but her memory was remarkable, and it is said that she could repeat over 100,000 lines of picturesque-verse founded on legends. She was most popular in the countryland, and for

Men have found this to be the case, and women should. At thirty, for instance, she can, for less than fifty dollars a year, take a twenty-year endowment policy of one thousand dollars, which guarantees her that amount when she reaches the agoof fifty. She will not feel burdened by the annual premium of fity dollars. But she will feel the comfort of a thousand dollars when she is fity. A woman's insurance for the education of her children is another factor of life insurance worthy of her thought, especially if she be a widow. In this way a mother may provide for the education of her children in case of her death. If the custom of mothers insuring their lives for their children at the time of the children's birth could become more general it would be one of the blessings of manhind. For women to in-sure their lives for the benefit of their husbands may well be an open question so far as the wisdom of such a course is concerned. But when the matter of life insurance for women is placed on a basis of self-protection in old age, for the benefit of children, or as one of the best means of saving money, or even as a wise system of investment, there cannot be the least question of The Woman's Vehicle. "Women have taken possession of the automobile as something distinc-tively within their province," writes Waldon Fawcett in the Woman's Home Companion. "There are at present in the city of Chicago twelve ladies who are entitled to classification as full-fledged automobile operators, since they regularly make trips about the city in automobiles, unattended or accompanied only by lady friends. In New York City there are twice as many. The city of Philadelphia has two or three feminine automobilists, and upward of a score of other ladies are found in the smaller communities hroughout the country. Several vomen physicians in various sections of the country are already using automobiles regularly in making their pro-fessional calls, and the new mode of travel has so many advantages that it is certain of a very general adoption.

HOW TO CLEAN RIBBONS.

o Methods That Should Appeal to the Busy Housewife. Now that ribbons are so extensively worn it is quite worth while to know how to clean them successfully and

The two methods here given have been put to the practical test many times over, so there need be no hesifancy about trying either one through fear of failure or of unsatisfactory re-

The first method is exceedingly simple and answers the purpose for all except white ribbons or those that are very badly mussed. Fill a glass fruit jar about half full of gasoline—more or less, according to the amount of ribbon to be cleaned. Place the sailed ribbons in the sailed ribbons in the sailed ribbons. soiled ribbons in it—all colors, lengths and kinds may go in at once —and serew the cover on tightly. Shake the bottle occasionally and leave it closed for from two to six hours, or over night. Then take out the ribbons, shake each one well and hang it to dry in the open air. The ribbons will be clean, and the dirt will be found in the bottom of the jar. Of course the ribbons need a thorough airing and sun bath to remove the odor of the gasoline, but that is all. No pressing is required, as the gaso-line does not affect them as water

The clear gasoline should be poured off without disturbing that at the bottom; then the dirt which has settled at the bottom should be emptied out and the clear gasoline put back, ready for use another time. Keep it tightly covered, and, of course, never use it near a fire, because of the danger of its igniting.

The gasoline will turn white rib bons yellow, so this method is not advisable for them. It also leaves the ibbons in the same condition that i found them as regards their being mussed or crumpled, so those that are badly creased should be given the treatment that is accorded the white ribbons,

Prepare a suds of soft water and any pure soap, wash the ribbon in this, just as you would wash a fine handkerchief; rinse and let it par-tially dry. Take it down while still damp in all parts and roll it smoothly over a wide card or piece of pasteboard, rolling a piece of clean white muslin with it. Wrap the muslin around last, so that the ribbon shall be covered, and place the whole un-der a heavy weight. A letter press is an excellent place in which to press it. Leave it until it shall have had ime to dry. The muslin will absorb the moisture.

The ribbon will come out looking fresh and clean and will have lost none of its "life," as is the case with ribbons which are pressed with an

Downles For Poor Girls.

anguages and dialects of the world linder seriously, he thinks, the progress and unity of mankind, says the London Spectator. We are not so sure about the progress, though we admit the unity in great part. Those who have studied most profoundly the history of an important part of mankind we think, naturally, the most important—viz., Europe, have been of opinion that the diversity of Europe, has been its leading progressive ele-ment. Suppose that at the overthrow of the western empire some one of the great Teutonic tribes had imposed its language on Europe, or that the debased Latin of the fifth century had been received and assimilated everywhere. Europe might have been in consequence a unit today, but the rich and varied growths of European litera-ture would not have existed. Uniformity would have prevailed and the impact of mind on mind, of race on race, of speech on speech, of thought on thought, would have been lost to mankind. Think of a Europe in which French, English, Italian, Spanish and German literature had never come to the birth, but in which some one great tongue had tried in vain to express man's varied mind. The Chinese min ister, coming from a vast and comparatively uniform empire, can perhaps scarcely realize with adequate force what we in Europe should have force what we in Europe should have bost. Nor are we quite sure that the unity would have been gained in anything like the degree supposed. Unity and uniformity are very different hings; and the profoundest unity ever effected, or that can be effected, was produced by a religion which was dereloped in great cosmopolitan cities where scores of languages were spoken by its converts. We remember et course, the great aid rendered by Greek o Christianity, but it was an aid per haps more on its philosophical side than on the side of everyday human speech. Racial unity is the next great uniting bond, but racial unity is not the same as linguistic unity and we see today people — like the Belgians and French, the Italians of Italy and those of Switzerland, the English-speaking dwellers in the United States and Canada—living close to-gether, speaking the same language and yet not fused or completely united

HAVE ODD RELIGIOUS BELIEFS. Living Openly at Mohammedans, the

Sabbateans Do Not Belleve the Faith. From the Pall Mall Gazette: Surely one of the oldest religions in the world is that of the Sabbateans of Salonica, of whom M. Danon has lately made a special study. The sect takes its name from one Sabbatai Cevi, a Smyrniote Hebrew, who flourished in the middle of the seventeenth century, and so muddled himself by constant study of the Cabala that he gave himself out for the Messiah. Thanks to some bogus miracles, thougands of Hebrews flocked to his standard and a serious revolt was on the point of breaking out when the pasha of the district captured bim and offered him the choice of accepting Islam or being incontinently shot. The story is that he chose the former alternative, and that his fellowers, disgusted by his apostasy, abandoned their belief in his messishship, and returned to their former faith. M. Danon's researches, however, show that the sect is not so extinct as has been thought. He had much difficulty in setting the information and it was only the lucky accident of one of the faithful sending his waistcoat to be mended, without remembering that a sorf of prayerbook was attiched in the back, that threw any real light in his way. As it was, the tailor had just time to show the document to a friend. who took a copy, now in M. Danon's possersion. From this it seems that the Deunmeh (or converted), as they are called by the Turks, still worship the God of Abraham under his cabalisme of the Infinite, and acknowl edge as their "Lord and King" Sab-batai Cevi, whom they call "the true Messiah and their Redeemer." They are not to take false cathe in the name or God or his Messiah, are not to muror God or his messian, are not to mur-der, "even though they hate anyone," to bear false witness nor to covet other people's goods. But they are to keep their faith a profound secret and to live like Mussulmans, keeping the Mozlem fasts and observing all their ceremonies without any scruple until the day when they are to "take vengross and lifelong hypocrisy with the practice of real virtues—it is especially said that there are no poor among them, every member of the commun-ity being willing to help at any time faith more than 1,000 families of Salonica believe. Justice Brewer as a Story Teller. Associate Justice Brewer, of the United States Supreme court, is one of the heat anecdote relaters in Washington, and frequently tells stories on himself. Here is an amusing one: When he was studying law in New York city he evinced some interest in the municipal campaign then on and was invited to make a speech on a certain occasion. He accepted and carefully fortifying himself with information on the subject and otherwise preparing for his part of the program he appeared on the platform in ample time. When he got up he made an eloquent depiction of the virtues of his party; he made deep draughts on simile and metaphor; his sentences were exquisitely rounded and it was a masterly example of a class-day oration. The audience sat unmoved, an occasional man alone greeting what he said. The next speaker was an un-kempt individual, careless of grammar, who committed a wholesale slaughter of the English language. But he made several good points in a crude way that appealed to the crowd, and when he ended the applause was deafening. As the then would-be lawyer with the fine periods passed out a man behind, not recognizing him, whispered in his ear: "I like that second feller better: talks sense."

Doctors Could Not Cure.

Eight years ago I got sore hands' commencing with a burning sensation on my fingers and on top of the hand. When I rubbed them, you could see little white pimples. I felt like twisting my fingers onto of their sockets. I had high fever, and cold chills ran over me, and so I kept it going until I was tired out. Nights, I had to walk the floor until I fell asleep. My hands peeled like an onion, the finger bails got loose, and the water ran out, and wherever there was a little pimple there the burning fire was—that happened at least ten times. I am running a blacksmith shop, horse-shoeing, and I would not shut up the shop for anybody, but it was hard. When I drove horse mails, the water from my hands ran through the bandage, on to the floor. My customers refused to look at my hand. I had a friend take me to the doctor; he gave a solution of something to bathe my hands. I went to another doctor, I think, for a year. I found your advertisement in a Utica newspaper, and I got the CUTICURA remedies. As soon as I used them I began to gain, and after using a small quantity of them I was entirely cured. I any more. I would not safer any more as I did, for the whole country.
